THAT the railroad depot on S. Court-st, which is now used exclusively by the Norfolk and Western Company, is 52 years old.

It was erected in 1883 by the old C. and M. V. Railway Company, following a long agitation on the part of Circleville merchants for a "modern depot which the town deserves."

Grund for the site, at the corner of Houston and S. Court-sts, was broken in November, 1882. The building, constructed of red brick and trimmed in granite in the corners, was completed in July, 1883, and dedicated with officials of the railroad company in attendance.

Two waiting rooms, a baggage room, now used by the express company, an office and wash-rooms, which were a part of the original structure, have not been changed.

Completion of the depot was hailed as "a major improvement for the town," by Miss Lillie Darst, The Herald's only woman-editor. Circleville, she commented, was one of the busiest and enterprising points along the line, and deserved a depot of this type.

When the Pennsylvania Railroad abandoned its passenger line through the city several years ago, the depot was left in the hands of the Norfolk and Western Company, which now operates it.

That the first clothes washing machine was introduced in Circleville on November 22, 1882, by the Haswell Company, dealer in hardware products. The families of Dr. N. E. Jones, Col. S. A. Moore, and J. P. Smith were the first in town to own one of the machines. The Herald's editor, Miss Darst, waxed enthusiastic, probably overly so, on seeing one of the machines, which were operated by hydraulic power. Said she: "After examining it and seeing it in operation, we are all satisfied that it surpasses anything invented for a like purpose . . . it is so simply constructed that it is impossible for it to get out of order."

THAT J. D. Delaplaine, this city, in November, 1882, sold an original copy of the "Ulster County (N. Y.) Advertiser" of January 4, 1800, containing the obituary of Gen. George Washington, to a New York museum for a price reputed to be $1,000

Mr. Delaplaine's copy of the paper, containing what is said to be one of the most comprehensive accounts of President Washington's death, was one of the few in existence even at that time. Photostat copies and other counterfeits appear from time to time. Mr. Delaplaine's copy is now said to be in the New York State Museum.

KIRWIN IS EDITOR

It was learned here today that Pat J. Kirwin, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Kirwin, and conductor of the "Did You Know" column, has been named editor of The Lantern, Ohio State university daily publication, for the school year of 1935-36.

SCHOOL BOARD GIVES FISCHER NEW CONTRACT

New Offer Covers Two Years; Superintendent on Job Five Months

C. L. GLENN RESIGNS

Robert Jewett, Columbus, Named as Successor

Charles H. May, president of the board of education, announced Saturday that the board of education has voted Frank Fischer, superintendent of schools, a new two-year contract.

The salary figure was not disclosed.

Mr. Fischer is completing his fifth month as superintendent being taken from the faculty during the Christmas holidays to fill the position left vacant by the death of E. L. Daley.

Proves His Ability

During the five months he has been at the head of the city system, Mr. Fischer has proved his executive ability to the board of education, to the pupils and to the teachers. When he was hired to succeed Mr. Daley he was given the understanding that he was to be given a contract for the next year, but he was surprised when he was offered the two-year contract.

Mr. Fischer today announced the resignation of C. L. Glenn, Jr., of Columbus, as teacher of social sciences.

On June 3 Mr. Glenn, a former teacher at Commercial Point, will begin his new duties as salesman for the Thebolt-Ehlert Co. of Milwaukee. He will have Ohio as his territory and will have frequent occasions to visit Circleville. Mr. Glenn has been on the teaching staff since last December, taking the place in the classroom left by Mr. Fischer's advancement.

Robert Jewett Hired

To fill the vacancy in social science, the board has elected Robert Jewett, also of Columbus.

Mr. Jewett will graduate next month from Ohio State university with the highest recommendations of anyone in this year's social science department. He is 22, unmarried, and will assume his new duties in September.

With the addition of Mr. Jewett to the teaching staff, and the election of Miss Marjorie Priest and E. E. Reger to the music and coaching positions, respectively, the teaching staff for the coming year is now complete.

SUMMER TO BEGIN AT CITY LIBRARY

The public library, starting on its summer schedule on Monday, June 3, will close each evening at 6 o'clock, with the exception of Saturdays, when the closing hour will be 8 p. m. The opening hour during the entire year is 9 a. m.

Special arrangements may be made for vacation reading, and books may be renewed by telephone or postcard.

Travel booklets, on file at the library, offer many suggestions for delightful summer trips, and stay-at-homes can wander far in interesting books without the discomforts of travel.

Some years ago, a local paper said that, in summer, the reading rooms of the public library were the coolest place in Circleville for those staying at home, the reading and recreation suggestions to be found at the library are many.

KUHN FINED $10

John Kuhn, this city, was committed to the county jail Friday when he was given a hearing before Squire H. O. Eveland for intoxication.

WILLIAM HEFFNER REACHERS 93 TODAY

William Heffner today quietly observed his ninety-third birthday anniversary at his home on E. Mound-st.

There was no celebration because of his impaired health.

PROCLAMATION

HAMILTON CHILD FIRST OF MONTH

Tenth in Watt-St Family Born at Three Minutes After Midnight

A little boy, the tenth child of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Hamilton, 739 Watt-st, is the "First Baby of June" and the child and its parents will win awards of a number of Circleville merchants.

The child was born at 12:03 a. m. Saturday, June 1. Dr. D. V. Courtright was the attending physician and announced the time of the birth.

The little boy has been named Paul William.

His father is an FERA worker.

Awards for the family include:

A floral tribute by the Brehmer greenhouses;

A box of cigars for the father by the Mecca restaurant;

A three months subscription to The Herald;

A savings account of $1 at the Circleville Savings and Banking Co.;

One quart of milk daily for two weeks without charge by the Circle City dairy;

A Chenile rug by Griffith and Martin;

A week's supply of bread and an angel food cake by the Ed. Wallace bakery;

Credit of $1 on a ton of coal by S C Grant;

Credit of $1 on an electrical heating pad by the Southeran Ohio Electric Co.

TREADWAY FACES 'CHAIR' TONIGHT

COLUMBUS, June 1—His last hope shattered by the refusal of Gov. Martin L. Davey to intervene, Peter D. Treadway, of Cleveland, today awaited his fate in the electric chair of Ohio Penitentiary this evening for the murder of Mrs. Ruth Steese, Cleveland welfare worker, Dec. 30, 1932.

Announcement of the governor's refusal to intervene in the case, which has teetered and see-sawed through three different courts and before 13 judges, and which also was balanced on the scale of the unique "lie-detector" test, made last night.

"No evidence has been submitted that would be conclusive or persuasive," the governor's announcement said.

BLAST WRECKS HOME OF OHIO COLLEGE HEAD

East Section of Tiffin Rocked by Dynamite Exposion Today

NO ONE INJURED

Cause is Mystery to City Officials

TIFFIN, June 1—The home of Dr. Charles E. Miller, president of Heidelberg college here, was damaged early today by a blast which rocked the entire east section of the city.

Police Chief Charles J. Mutchler said the blast was caused by a dynamite charge. Pieces of burned fuse were found near the scene, he said.

Asleep in House

Dr. Miller, his wife and their daughter Gretchen, who is an instructor in the college, were asleep in the house when the explosion occurred. None was hurt although their beds were splattered with broken glass, shattered from the windows by the force of the blast.

Damage to the residence, which is located on the Heidelberg campus, was confined mostly to the front porch which was blown into fragments. Pieces of debris were hurled some distance, striking nearby houses. One heavy fragment broke a window in Science Hall on the campus.

Police Chief Mutchler said that an apparently heavy charge of dynamite was used in setting off the blast.

Reason for the dynamite blast mystified local authorities. Dr. Miller asserted he knew of no cause for the attack. It was recalled, however, that the garage at the rear of the Miller home recently was daubed with yellow paint. Three years ago, Dr. Miller's office at the college was stoned during a student demonstration for a more liberal campus social program. Miller's resignation also was demanded at the time.

No Recent Outbreaks

Since then, however, there have been no student outbreaks of any sort outside of the usual, minor college pranks. Following the demonstrations four years ago, college authorities moved to permit dancing on the campus.

51 NEW AUTOS SOLD IN MAY

Fifty-one new automobiles were sold in Pickaway-co during May, according to records on file in the office of Clerk of Courts A. L. Wilder. The number is nine less than the sales reported in April.

Ford leads the list in the county with 12 and Plymouth and Chevrolet follow closely with 10 and 9 respectively.

TODAY ENDS SCHOOL PAPER FOR SUMMER

Today's issue marks the end of The Red and Black department of The Herald until the next school year.

Three columns of news concerning the high school and its functions have been published every Saturday since school started by the journalism department of the school, first under the direction of Frank Fischer, then under C. L. Glenn, Jr.

The department will be resumed next fall when school starts.

Two students, Elizabeth Dowden and George Ammer, have had much to do with the success of The Red and Black. The former is its editor while the latter has been its "mechanical man." Ammer has "put The Red and Black together" every week and his efforts have been appreciated by The Herald force.

Young Weyerhaeuser, kidnaped a week ago while leaving school in Tacoma, Wash., was back home with his parents today. It is reported $200,000 was paid in ransom money for his release.

SENIOR RITES SUNDAY NIGHT

Baccalaureate To Be Held In Methodist Church For 79 Graduates.

The 79 graduating seniors of Circleville high school will attend baccalaureate services in the First Methodist church Sunday evening. The service starts at 7:30 o'clock under the direction of Rev. Herman A. Sayre, pastor.

All graduates have been instructed by Principal E. I. Gephart to be in the church basement not later than 7:15.

The entire main floor of the church has been reserved for graduates and their families and friends providing the latter are there not later than 7:15. At that time the doors will be open to the public. There is plenty of seating room in the balcony and the Sunday school room.

The annual commencement program is scheduled for Tuesday at 8 p. m. Reserved seats will go on sale Monday at noon at the Fitzpatrick printery.

STRIKE CALL SENT TO NATION MINERS

WASHINGTON, June 1 — A strike call which will take all the bituminous coal miners in the Appalachian area, excuding Canada, out of the mines by midnight, June 16, was issued today by the United Mine Workers of America.

The call was sent out because of the break-down of negotiations for a new contract with the operators, and the outlawing of the Bituminous coal code by the Supreme court's decision in the NRA case.

The present code and contract expires at midnight June 16.

Only a sufficient number of men will remain at work to insure protection of mining property, under an agreement with the operators.

On the strike date, it is estimated there will be something less than four weeks supply of coal above ground.

Hospital News

Miss Katherine Mead, Logan-st, who has been seriously ill in Berger hospital, was reported improving Saturday morning.

Mrs. John Wagner, of Chillicothe, underwent a major operation at Mt. Carmel hospital, Columbus, Friday. She is a former resident of this city and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel D. Stout, Pleasant-st.

CHAINED IN HOLE IN GROUND, TACOMA YOUTH TELLS POLICE

George Weyerhaeuser, Scion of Wealthy Lumber Family, Found Wandering by Rancher; $20,000 Ransom Reported Paid to Abductors; Federal Men in Action.

TACOMA, Wash., June 1.—Nine-year-old George Weyerhaeuser was delivered safely to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Weyerhaeuser at 7:53 a. m. today.

The boy was returned to his parents 7½ days after he was kidnaped from a street near the Lowell public school, and approximately 24 hours after his parents were reported to have paid $200,000 ransom for his return.

The boy, according to a man named Boniza who found him wandering at Issaquah, Wash., 14 miles from Seattle, related that he had been "chained in a hole in the ground" by his kidnapers.

The boy was unharmed, however.

WANDERED TO HOME

He wandered about four miles from the spot where he was released before coming into the backyard of the farm home of Boniza.

"I am George Weyerhaeuser," the curly haired youth told the startled rancher.

Boniza immediately rushed with the boy to Renton, Wash., where a telephone call was made to Tacoma police. The rancher declared:

"I have just found the Weyerhaeuser boy. He is with me now. What shall I do?"

It was Detective Harold Thornburg who answered the telephone.

"Bring him to Tacoma immediately," Thornburg instructed.

The detective flashed the news to department of justice agents who immediately checked the telephone call and learned from the telephone operator at Renton and also a service station operator named Ernie Buchlund that they, too, had positively identified the boy.

Bachlund likewise related that the boy told how he had been "chained in a hole in the ground." The boy believed his cruel hiding place, similar to the Arizona abduction place of little June Robles, was near Aberdeen, Wash.

It was nearly an hour before Boniza in an old Model T Ford made the trip from Renton to Tacoma.

Met by Patrolmen

Screaming squads of state highway patrolmen sped out on all highways to meet the rancher and the Weyerhaeuser boy who was sitting in the front seat and smiling.

The boy was delivered into the arms of his parents by Boniza, a grey haired man.

Boniza found the boy in his backyard near Issaquah, Wash., after he had been released from an automobile trunk into which he had been jammed by the kidnapers for the last few miles of their journey.

The rescue car drove into the entrance at the Weyerhaeuser home.

A federal guard rushed the disheveled boy up the stairs and into the house.

Paul Mottau, former Pierce-co deputy sheriff, who knows the boy by sight, positively recognized him as he was rushed into the house.

NOBLE MOWERY DIES IN WEST

Former Postal Employe Succumbs at 45; Funeral Services Here Monday.

Funeral services will be held Monday at 2 p. m. in the U. B. church for Noble G. Mowery, aged 45, who died Wednesday in Lincoln, Neb. of complications. Burial will be in Forest cemetery by the W. H. Albaugh Co.

Mr. Mowery, who was a former clerk in the post office, was born in Pickaway-co March 8, 1890 a son of William and Leana Fetherol Mowery. He was unmarried.

The deceased is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Minnie Weaver of Columbus and Mrs. Ralph Long of this city, and three brothers, A. N. of Columbus, L. D. of Cleveland, and D. W. of Warren.

The body will be at the Albaugh chapel until the hour of service.

FEDERAL FORCES READY TO MOVE

TACOMA, Wash., June 1 — A great steel-jawed trap today stood ready to snap shut at a moment's notice and crush the kidnapers of nine-year-old George Weyerhaeuser in its grip.

Hundreds of police and state highway patrolmen were deployed throughout Washington, from the Columbia river to the Canadian line, ready to clamp shut the trap from which the kidnap gang will have slim chances of escape.

Ace G-Men of the department of justice huddled in conference in their secret office here, or sped about the state on unknown missions, sharpening the deadly teeth of the trap.

They waited only for the word to be flashed that the schoolboy victim has been returned safely, or definite word that he will not be returned.

FLOOD TOLL 45

DENVER, Colo., June 1—The death toll stood at 45 today after one of the most devastating floods in Colorado's history spread its wings of destruction into Wyoming, Kansas and Nebraska.

Colorado's known dead totaled 23, but this list did not include many unidentified persons seen swept away.

Eight died as the result of a raging wall of water that swept down Big Bear creek, 30 miles north of Cheyenne, Wyo.

Elks Club Planning Open House Tuesday

The Elks club is planning its annual installation of officers and an open house Tuesday evening with the installation to begin at 8 o'clock.

There will be a buffet lunch and entertainment with the club's National Convention committee in charge of the affair.

The remodeled club room and redecorated home will be open during the entire evening. Elks are urged to take their friends to the open house.

200 BRITONS DEAD IN INDIA DISASTER

LONDON, June 1—About 200 Britons were killed in yesterday's catastrophic earthquake in Baluchistan, India, the India office announced officially today.

The government announced it was impossible to estimate the Indian casualties.

Reuter's News agency, in a dispatch direct from Quetta, major scene of tragedy, reported an unofficial estimate that 30,600 persons had been killed and injured in the disaster.

HAMILTON CHILD FIRST OF MONTH

Tenth in Watt-St Family Born at Three Minutes After Midnight

A little boy, the tenth child of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Hamilton, 739 Watt-st, is the "First Baby of June" and the child and its parents will win awards of a number of Circleville merchants.

The child was born at 12:03 a. m. Saturday, June 1. Dr. D. V. Courtright was the attending physician and announced the time of the birth.

The little boy has been named Paul William.

His father is an FERA worker.

Awards for the family include:

A floral tribute by the Brehmer greenhouses;

A box of cigars for the father by the Mecca restaurant;

A three months subscription to The Herald;

A savings account of $1 at the Circleville Savings and Banking Co.;

One quart of milk daily for two weeks without charge by the Circle City dairy;

A Chenile rug by Griffith and Martin;

A week's supply of bread and an angel food cake by the Ed. Wallace bakery;

Crecit of $1 on a ton of coal by S. C. Grant;

Credit of $1 on an electrical heating pad by the Southeran Ohio Electric Co.

TREADWAY FACES 'CHAIR' TONIGHT

COLUMBUS, June 1—His last hope shattered by the refusal of Gov. Martin L. Davey to intervene, Peter D. Treadway, of Cleveland, today awaited his fate in the electric chair of Ohio Penitentiary this evening for the murder of Mrs. Ruth Steese, Cleveland welfare worker, Dec. 30, 1932.

Announcement of the governor's refusal to intervene in the case, which has teetered and see-sawed through three different courts and before 13 judges, and which also was balanced on the scale of the unique "lie-detector" test, made last night.

"No evidence has been submitted that would be conclusive or persuasive," the governor's announcement said.

BLAST WRECKS HOME OF OHIO COLLEGE HEAD

East Section of Tiffin Rocked by Dynamite Exposion Today

NO ONE INJURED

Cause is Mystery to City Officials

TIFFIN, June 1—The home of Dr. Charles E. Miller, president of Heidelberg college here, was damaged early today by a blast which rocked the entire east section of the city.

Police Chief Charles J. Mutchler said the blast was caused by a dynamite charge. Pieces of burned fuse were found near the scene, he said.

Asleep in House

Dr. Miller, his wife and their daughter Gretchen, who is an instructor in the college, were asleep in the house when the explosion occurred. None was hurt although their beds were splattered with broken glass, shattered from the windows by the force of the blast.

Damage to the residence, which is located on the Heidelberg campus, was confined mostly to the front porch which was blown into fragments. Pieces of debris were hurled some distance, striking nearby houses. One heavy fragment broke a window in Science Hall on the campus.

Police Chief Mutchler said that an apparently heavy charge of dynamite was used in setting off the blast.

Reason for the dynamite blast mystified local authorities. Dr. Miller asserted he knew of no cause for the attack. It was recalled, however, that the garage at the rear of the Miller home recently was daubed with yellow paint. Three years ago, Dr. Miller's office at the college was stoned during a student demonstration for a more liberal campus social program. Miller's resignation also was demanded at the time.

No Recent Outbreaks

Since then, however, there have been no student outbreaks of any sort outside of the usual, minor college pranks. Following the demonstrations four years ago, college authorities moved to permit dancing on the campus.

51 NEW AUTOS SOLD IN MAY

Fifty-one new automobiles were sold in Pickaway-co during May, according to records on file in the office of Clerk of Courts A. L. Wilder. The number is nine less than the sales reported in April.

Ford leads the list in the county with 12 and Plymouth and Chevrolet follow closely with 10 and 9 respectively.

TODAY ENDS SCHOOL PAPER FOR SUMMER

Today's issue marks the end of The Red and Black department of The Herald until the next school year.

Three columns of news concerning the high school and its functions have been published every Saturday since school started by the journalism department of the school, first under the direction of Frank Fischer, then under C. L. Glenn, Jr.

The department will be resumed next fall when school starts.

Two students, Elizabeth Dowden and George Ammer, have had much to do with the success of The Red and Black. The former is its editor while the latter has been its "mechanical man." Ammer has "put The Red and Black together" every week and his efforts have been appreciated by The Herald force.

George Weyerhaeuser

Young Weyerhaeuser, kidnaped a week ago while leaving school in Tacoma, Wash., was back home with his parents today. It is reported $200,000 was paid in ransom money for his release.

SENIOR RITES SUNDAY NIGHT

Baccalaureate To Be Held In Methodist Church For 79 Graduates.

The 79 graduating seniors of Circleville high school will attend baccalaureate services in the First Methodist church Sunday evening. The service starts at 7:30 o'clock under the direction of Rev. Herman A. Sayre, pastor.

All graduates have been instructed by Principal E. I. Gephart to be in the church basement not later than 7:15.

The entire main floor of the church has been reserved for graduates and their families and friends providing the latter are there not later than 7:15. At that time the doors will be open to the public. There is plenty of seating room in the balcony and the Sunday school room.

The annual commencement program is scheduled for Tuesday at 8 p. m. Reserved seats will go on sale Monday at noon at the Fitzpatrick printery.

STRIKE CALL SENT TO NATION MINERS

WASHINGTON, June 1 — A strike call which will take all the bituminous coal miners in the Appalachian area, excuding Canada, out of the mines by midnight, June 16, was issued today by the United Mine Workers of America.

The call was sent out because of the break-down of negotiations for a new contract with the operators, and the outlawing of the Bituminous coal code by the Supreme court's decision in the NRA case.

The present code and contract expires at midnight June 16.

Only a sufficient number of men will remain at work to insure protection of mining property, under an agreement with the operators.

On the strike date, it is estimated there will be something less than four weeks supply of coal above ground.

Hospital News

Miss Katherine Mead, Logan-st, who has been seriously ill in Berger hospital, was reported improving Saturday morning.

Mrs. John Wagner, of Chillicothe, underwent a major operation at Mt. Carmel hospital, Columbus, Friday. She is a former resident of this city and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel D. Stout, Pleasant-st.

CHAINED IN HOLE IN GROUND, TACOMA YOUTH TELLS POLICE

George Weyerhaeuser, Scion of Wealthy Lumber Family, Found Wandering by Rancher; $20,000 Ransom Reported Paid to Abductors; Federal Men in Action.

TACOMA, Wash., June 1.—Nine-year-old George Weyerhaeuser was delivered safely to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Weyerhaeuser at 7:53 a. m. today.

The boy was returned to his parents 7½ days after he was kidnaped from a street near the Lowell public school, and approximately 24 hours after his parents were reported to have paid $200,000 ransom for his return.

The boy, according to a man named Boniza who found him wandering at Issaquah, Wash., 14 miles from Seattle, related that he had been "chained in a hole in the ground" by his kidnapers.

The boy was unharmed, however.

WANDERED TO HOME

He wandered about four miles from the spot where he was released before coming into the backyard of the farm home of Boniza.

"I am George Weyerhaeuser," the curly haired youth told the startled rancher.

Boniza immediately rushed with the boy to Renton, Wash., where a telephone call was made to Tacoma police. The rancher declared:

"I have just found the Weyerhaeuser boy. He is with me now. What shall I do?"

It was Detective Harold Thornburg who answered the telephone.

"Bring him to Tacoma immediately," Thornburg instructed.

The detective flashed the news to department of justice agents who immediately checked the telephone call and learned from the telephone operator at Renton and also a service station operator named Ernie Buchlund that they, too, had positively identified the boy.

Bachlund likewise related that the boy told how he had been "chained in a hole in the ground." The boy believed his cruel hiding place, similar to the Arizona abduction place of little June Robles, was near Aberdeen, Wash.

It was nearly an hour before Boniza in an old Model T Ford made the trip from Renton to Tacoma.

Met by Patrolmen

Screaming squads of state highway patrolmen sped out on all highways to meet the rancher and the Weyerhaeuser boy who was sitting in the front seat and smiling.

The boy was delivered into the arms of his parents by Boniza, a grey haired man.

Boniza found the boy in his backyard near Issaquah, Wash., after he had been released from an automobile trunk into which he had been jammed by the kidnapers for the last few miles of their journey.

The rescue car drove into the entrance at the Weyerhaeuser home.

A federal guard rushed the disheveled boy up the stairs and into the house.

Paul Mottau, former Pierce-co deputy sheriff, who knows the boy by sight, positively recognized him as he was rushed into the house.

NOBLE MOWERY DIES IN WEST

Former Postal Employe Succumbs at 45; Funeral Services Here Monday.

Funeral services will be held Monday at 2 p. m. in the U. B. church for Noble G. Mowery, aged 45, who died Wednesday in Lincoln, Neb. of complications. Burial will be in Forest cemetery by the W. H. Albaugh Co.

Mr. Mowery, who was a former clerk in the post office, was born in Pickaway-co March 8, 1890 a son of William and Leana Fetherol Mowery. He was unmarried.

The deceased is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Minnie Weaver of Columbus and Mrs. Ralph Long of this city, and three brothers, A. N. of Columbus, L. D. of Cleveland, and D. W. of Warren.

The body will be at the Albaugh chapel until the hour of service.

FEDERAL FORCES READY TO MOVE

TACOMA, Wash., June 1 — A great steel-jawed trap today stood ready to snap shut at a moment's notice and crush the kidnapers of nine-year-old George Weyerhaeuser in its grip.

Hundreds of police and state highway patrolmen were deployed throughout Washington, from the Columbia river to the Canadian line, ready to clamp shut the trap from which the kidnap gang will have slim chances of escape.

Ace G-Men of the department of justice huddled in conference in their secret office here, or sped about the state on unknown missions, sharpening the deadly teeth of the trap.

They waited only for the word to be flashed that the schoolboy victim has been returned safely, or definite word that he will not be returned.

FLOOD TOLL 45

DENVER, Colo., June 1—The death toll stood at 45 today after one of the most devastating floods in Colorado's history spread its wings of destruction into Wyoming, Kansas and Nebraska.

Colorado's known dead totaled 23, but this list did not include many unidentified persons seen swept away.

Eight died as the result of a raging wall of water that swept down Big Bear creek, 30 miles north of Cheyenne, Wyo.

Elks Club Planning Open House Tuesday

The Elks club is planning its annual installation of officers and an open house Tuesday evening with the installation to begin at 8 o'clock.

There will be a buffet lunch and entertainment with the club's National Convention committee in charge of the affair.

The remodeled club room and redecorated home will be open during the entire evening. Elks are urged to take their friends to the open house.

200 BRITONS DEAD IN INDIA DISASTER

LONDON, June 1—About 200 Britons were killed in yesterday's catastrophic earthquake in Baluchistan, India, the India office announced officially today.

The government announced it was impossible to estimate the Indian casualties.

Reuter's News agency, in a dispatch direct from Quetta, major scene of tragedy, reported an unofficial estimate that 30,000 persons had been killed and injured in the disaster.

This Sunday we all study together worship and the Lord's day. Last Sunday 13 persons in the state of Ohio crashed into eternity to face the Judge of all the earth and give an account. What if those same persons had reverently and quietly gone to the old home church to worship the Lord on the days that He reserves for himself? They might have been living today and working to save poor lost sinners. The faithful few would have been encouraged by their presence at the Lord's house and the good fellowship of God's people would have been increased. And what of the money spent speeding pleasures of this life? If dropped into the church treasury would have helped provide things honest in church finances and had some left to feed the poor.

It is not the end of study, rather the beginning. These years past give but the key to hidden treasures. The field has grown too large for any one man to touch but more than the rim. Every day new fields are being opened. It seems there should be no trouble for our young people to find work, but it is. But hope and courage and faith and prayer still open doors. It is those qualities religion endeavors to give the receptive. To our youth beginning life out of school, we would say, Hold fast to God! Hold fast to His Church! Go to church tomorrow. DEPENDENT ON SPIRITUAL LIFE

Prosperity Dependent On Spiritual Life. Roger Babson recently said," People should understand that before prosperity can return there must be renewed interest in the spiritual life both individuals and nations. Nations should realize that the world has always possessed raw materials and labor; but has been prosperous only when people have been actuated by a religious faith to use those resources for advancement and service. This is the law of life and now is the time when it should be taught in churches, schools and colleges."

In thousands of Chinese homes the idols have been thrown out, the old religions have become tottering ruins, and the temples vacated. The change is credited to the youth of China.

In the recent elections, the candidate for mayor of Vancouver, B. C. ran on a platform of Christian record and civic decency. During the campaign he daily attended special prayer services, and when elected, his first act as mayor was to proclaim a day of prayer.

The first complete Bible to be printed in America, the so-called Indian Bible, dated 1663 and published for the use of the Rev. John Eliot in his work among the Indians of New England was recently sold at auction. Only 50 of the 1000 copies printed are now in existence.

For some time negotiations have been going on with a view to uniting in a single body the two Reformed Church of France. A declaration of faith has been agreed upon which will serve as the basis for the prospective fusions of the two ecclesiastical organizations.

In the past 100 years the American Bible Society has distributed 116,000 volumes of the Bible to the blind. The century of service to the sightless will be rounded out this month. In this time the Bible has been supplied in 25 languages and systems, including Japanese Braille, portions of Portugese, Spanish and Siamese Braille and Korean.

More than 50 religious and secular organizations in Greater New York sponsored a "No More War Parade" May 18th in New York City. Last year 10,000 marchers participated in a similar parade.

In many places illegal collections for the building of churches have been put through with great success. Religious parsons make great sacrifices to support their churches.

"Singin' In the Rain"

A college president has said, 'All my life I have heard great cheering. Expectant cheers, clamorous cheers, loyal cheers, the thundering cheers of victory. But I never heard such cheers before or since, as that which a crippled boy on commencement day, carried across the platform in the arms of a college football player to receive his degree with honor.

Four years before entering college, his professor said, "Stand up". "I should like to, sir,", came the answer, "but I have not been able to do that since I was four years old."

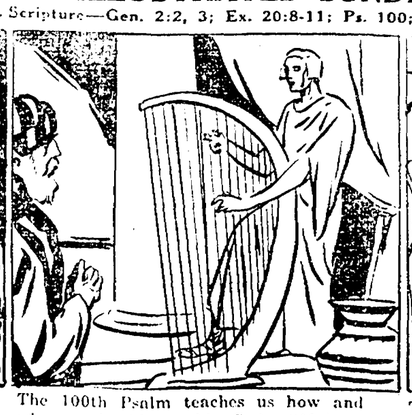
Our Day of Worship — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

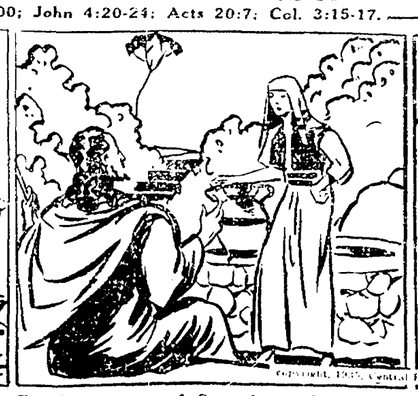
By the Rev. Alvin E. Bell And Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Gen. 2:2, 3; Ex. 20:8-11; Ps. 100; John 4:20-24; Acts 20:7; Col. 3:15-17.

When God gave the Ten Commandments to the nation through Moses on Mount Sinai he said, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy, six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work: but the seventh day is a Sabbath unto the Lord thy God."



The 100th Psalm teaches us how and why we should worship God. "Make a joyful noise unto the Lord, all ye lands, serve the Lord with gladness: come before his presence with singing. . . . For the Lord is good; his mercy is everlasting and his truth endureth to all gen-



To the woman of Samaria at Jacob's well Jesus said that true worship must not be limited to any special place, but that "God is a Spirit and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth."

On his way to Jerusalem Paul stopped at Troas and when the Christians were gathered together to worship on the first day of the week he preached to them. Writing to another group later he encouraged them to worship "in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs."

CHURCH OF CHRIST
(Undenominational)

Church meets in First National Bank Building on Sundays only. Other church meetings at 451 E. Main-st.

10 a. m. Devotional service, sermon, Lord's Supper and church school.

No night services Sunday on account of Baccalaureate at the M. E. church.

This Sunday we all study together worship and the Lord's day. Last Sunday 13 persons in the state of Ohio crashed into eternity to face the Judge of all the earth and give an account. What if those same persons had reverently and quietly gone to the old home church to worship the Lord on the days that He reserves for himself? They might have been living today and working to save poor lost sinners. The faithful few would have been encouraged by their presence at the Lord's house and the good fellowship of God's people would have been increased. And what of the money spent speeding pleasures of this life? If dropped into the church treasury would have helped provide things honest in church finances and had some left to feed the poor.

This is the Commencement season .We congratulate our young people who are stepping out from our High School with their diploma as a token of a finished course of study. It is not the end of study, rather the beginning. These years past give but the key to hidden treasures. The field has grown too large for any one man to touch but more than the rim. Every day new fields are being opened. It seems there should be no trouble for our young people to find work, but it is. But hope and courage and faith and prayer still open doors. It is those qualities religion endeavors to give the receptive. To our youth beginning life out of school, we would say, Hold fast to God! Hold fast to His Church! Go to church tomorrow. Take a friend.

DEPENDENT ON SPIRITUAL LIFE

Prosperity Dependent On Spiritual Life. Roger Babson recently said," People should understand that before prosperity can return there must be renewed interest in the spiritual life both individuals and nations. Nations should realize that the world has always possessed raw materials and labor; but has been prosperous only when people have been actuated by a religious faith to use those resources for advancement and service. This is the law of life and now is the time when it should be taught in churches, schools and colleges."

In thousands of Chinese homes the idols have been thrown out, the old religions have become tottering ruins, and the temples vacated. The change is credited to the youth of China.

In the recent elections, the candidate for mayor of Vancouver, B. C. ran on a platform of Christian record and civic decency. During the campaign he daily attended special prayer services, and when elected, his first act as mayor was to proclaim a day of prayer.

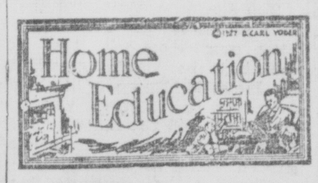
The first complete Bible to be printed in America, the so-called Indian Bible, dated 1663 and published for the use of the Rev. John Eliot in his work among the Indians of New England was recently sold at auction. Only 50 of the 1000 copies printed are now in existence.

For some time negotiations have been going on with a view to uniting in a single body the two Reformed Church of France. A declaration of faith has been agreed upon which will serve as the basis for the prospective fusions of the two ecclesiastical organizations.

In the past 100 years the American Bible Society has distributed 116,000 volumes of the Bible to the blind. The century of service to the sightless will be rounded out this month. In this time the Bible has been supplied in 25 languages and systems, including Japanese Braille, portions of Portugese, Spanish and Siamese Braille and Korean.

More than 50 religious and secular organizations in Greater New York sponsored a "No More War Parade" May 18th in New York City. Last year 10,000 marchers participated in a similar parade.

A periodical from Germany reports that the anti-God movement in Russia, though by no means dead, generally acknowledges that it is failing. In many places illegal collections for the building of churches have been put through with great success. Religious parsons make great sacrifices to support their churches.



"Singin' In the Rain"

A college president has said, 'All my life I have heard great cheering. Expectant cheers, clamorous cheers, loyal cheers, the thundering cheers of victory. But I never heard such cheers before or since, as that which a crippled boy on commencement day, carried across the platform in the arms of a college football player to receive his degree with honor.

Four years before entering college, his professor said, "Stand up". "I should like to, sir,", came the answer, "but I have not been able to do that since I was four years old."

Suppose we put ourselves in that boy's place. How easy to surrender; to stop dreaming; to become lost in a morass of self-pity. Instead that boy fought his fight and so carried himself that thousands cheered him on the day of recognition because he kept "Singin' in the Rain."

Our Day of Worship — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By the Rev. Alvin E. Bell And Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Gen. 2:2, 3; Ex. 20:8-11; Ps. 100; John 4:20-24; Acts 20:7; Col. 3:15-17.

When God gave the Ten Commandments to the nation through Moses on Mount Sinai he said, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy, six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work: but the seventh day is a Sabbath unto the Lord thy God."

The 100th Psalm teaches us how and why we should worship God. "Make a joyful noise unto the Lord, all ye lands, serve the Lord with gladness: come before his presence with singing. . . . For the Lord is good; his mercy is everlasting and his truth endureth to all gen-

To the woman of Samaria at Jacob's well Jesus said that true worship must not be limited to any special place, but that "God is a Spirit and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth."

On his way to Jerusalem Paul stopped at Troas and when the Christians were gathered together to worship on the first day of the week he preached to them. Writing to another group later he encouraged them to worship "in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs."

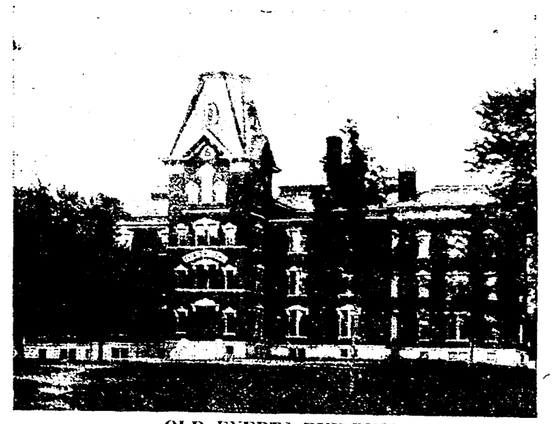
"OLD EVERTS"—GONE BUT NOT FORGOTTEN!



OLD EVERTS BUILDING

AGAIN at Commencement time, the memories of many of the Circleville citizens are turned to "those days of gladness" when they were probably attending the quaint architectural structure pictured above, which was built in 1852 under the name The Union Schoolhouse.

The building stood on a four-acre lot and cost the taxpayers $30,000.

In 1875 its name was changed to "Everts' building" in honor of Mr. E. Everts, an earnest and successful school teacher of this district who had died many years before its erection.

At this time it was a three-story building of 20 rooms, seating about 900 grade and high school students.

The high school department was located on the first floor occupying four rooms, in addition to the chemistry and physics laboratory in the basement.

Five instructors comprised the faculty and the curriculum was similar to that offered today. It is interesting to note that until 1902 military training was compulsory.

"Everts" was a progressive school, "using only the latest textbooks". It was on the accredited list of colleges of the state and during the 20 years (from 1886 to 1906) records show that over 15 per cent of its graduates continued with higher education.

The first commencement was held in March, 1858, at which five students graduated. From that time until its destruction in 1918, 60 classes with an aggregate of 803 students graduated.

TEACHERS' PLANS DURING VACATION

While prodding into the future plans of the teachers it was ascertained that their vacations range from trips to Europe and points west to summer school.

The feminine faculty members find traveling the most luring at this time. Miss Brown will make an extended tour of the New England states and Canada. Miss Watson is also planning a similar tour of the North.

A tour to Europe will take the majority of the summer time of Miss Ryan and Miss Hitler.

Miss Yates, Mrs. Davis, Miss Mattinson, and Miss Rains have not yet completed their plans. Miss Pigman will visit her home in Cincinnati.

Mr. Fischer, Mr. Gephart, and Mr. Reger, the new coach, will attend the Ohio State university summer session.

Mr. Cress will work in Troy, Ohio, and will make a trip to Lake Reynolds in Michigan. Mr. Glenn is also going to Michigan. Mr. Bowen will visit in Ashley, Ohio. The west was selected as the place of interest for Mr. Herberholz. Miss Day has accepted a position in Columbus.

Mr. Watts, who believes in working 24 hours a day and 365 days a year, will interview prospective students for the Dickson Secretarial school. Mr. Watts states that this school is distinctive in that it teaches the A-1 method of shorthand and restricts the enrollment to suit the needs of the times so that everyone is reasonably sure of employment.

Mr. Zaenglein will remain at home during the summer months. No definite plans have been made by Mr. Bowen.

34 SENIORS PLAN HIGHER EDUCATION

The Red and Black reporter's survey shows that over 40 per cent of the graduating class expect to pusue a higher education.

Those who expect to attend Ohio State university are George Ammer, Carl Boggs, Elizabeth Dowden, Tom Kirwin, Bernice Liston, Otis Mader, Stanley Melvin, Ned Plum, Betty Sayre, and George Speakman.

Kenneth Davis, Dorothy Fausnaugh, Eloise Hatzo, Martha McCrady, Regina Mack, Betty Morris, Howard Richardson, Ethel Stoneback, and Vera Zaenglein are planning to attend Capitol university.

Elsie Brehmer, Joe Bell, Walter Osborn, and Jim Lyle will probably enroll at Ohio University at Athens.

Margie Merz may enter the Chillicothe Business school; Kermit Wilson, the Cincinnat Art school; and Virginia Cady and John Carle, a business college.

In Lydia Given Circleville will have its second attendant to Western college for Women.

Marianne Bennett expects to take a course in Medical Technology, while Horace Gilmore will study medicine at the University of Michigan. Kathryn Chalfin and Ernestine Eylar are planning to enter Nurses' Training.

Robert Styers and Robert Teal will take the post-graduate course at C. H. S.

STUDENTS PRESENT MARIONETTE SHOW

Marionettes animated by Philip Moore and Jimmy Moffitt proved to Circleville high school Monday afternoon in assembly that it isn't necessary to import puppet shows from the "World's Fair" to furnish splendid entertainment.

The theme for this show, the puppets, and the miniature stage were entirely made by these boys.

The Life of a Sailor

I'd like to be a sailor bold,
And sail the bounding main,
To see adventures strange unfold,
From Singapore to Spain.

I long to breathe the salty air,
And watch the sea-gulls soar,
To sail in weather foul or fair,
And never sight the shore.

I want to see the porpoise play,
Just off the vessel's stern,
Though what it is that makes them gay
I'll never learn.

I'd like to hear the sailors tell
Tales better left untold,
Of treasure isles and bloody deeds
And pirate hoards of gold.

I yearn to spend my life at sea,
To live among the brave,
And when I die, I wish to be
With them—as my grave.

JOURNALISM AT CIRCLEVILLE

AN EDITORIAL

As these three columns go to press," the 300th issue of The Red and Black as a department of The Herald will have been completed. Of course, this weekly project of the journalism class of Circleville high school has been published more times than this, having formerly been issued as a mimeographed paper and later as a journal in itself and having its own subscribers.

Eight years ago The Herald conceived of a new service to its subscribers by bring to them the news of the local educational institutions in these weekly columns published entirely by the students.

During the past term this high school newspaper has been written by the journalism class of C. H. S., edited by Elizabeth Dowden and published by George Ammer in cooperation with the technical staff of The Herald. Miss C. L. Glenn and Mr. Frank Fischer served as literary advisors with Principal Gephart as honorary member of the staff.

The journalism class takes this opportunity to thank the advisors and the Editorial and Technical staffs of The Herald for their cooperation during the issuance of this weekly project.

"OLD EVERTS"—GONE BUT NOT FORGOTTEN!

* * *

AGAIN at Commencement time, the memories of many of the Circleville citizens are turned to "those days of gladness" when they were probably attending the quaint architectural structure pictured above, which was built in 1852 under the name The Union Schoolhouse.

The building stood on a four-acre lot and cost the taxpayers $30,000.

In 1875 its name was changed to "Everts' building" in honor of Mr. E. Everts, an earnest and successful school teacher of this district who had died many years before its erection.

At this time it was a three-story building of 20 rooms, seating about 900 grade and high school students.

The high school department was located on the first floor occupying four rooms, in addition to the chemistry and physics laboratory in the basement.

Five instructors comprised the faculty and the curriculum was similar to that offered today. It is interesting to note that until 1902 military training was compulsory.

"Everts" was a progressive school, "using only the latest textbooks". It was on the accredited list of colleges of the state and during the 20 years (from 1886 to 1906) records show that over 15 per cent of its graduates continued with higher education.

The first commencement was held in March, 1858, at which five students graduated. From that time until its destruction in 1918, 60 classes with an aggregate of 503 students graduated.

TEACHERS' PLANS DURING VACATION

While prodding into the future plans of the teachers it was unearthed that their vacations range from trips to Europe and a points west to summer school.

The feminine faculty members find traveling the most luring pas time. Miss Brown will make a extended tour of the New England states and Canada. Miss Watson also planning a similar tour of th North.

A tour to Europe will take u the majority of the summer fo Miss Ryan and Miss Hitler.

Miss Yates, Mrs. Davis, Mis Mattinson, and Miss Rains hav not yet completed their plans. Mis Pigman will visit her home i Cincinnati.

Mr. Fischer, Mr. Gephart, an Mr. Reger, the new coach, will at tend the Ohio State universit summer session.

Mr. Cress will work in Troy Ohio, and will make a trip to Lak Reynolds in Michigan. Mr. Glen is also going to Michigan. Mr. Le will visit in Ashley, Ohio. Th west was selected as the place o interest for Mr. Herberholz. Mr Day has accepted a position i Columbus.

Mr. Watts, who believes i working 24 hours a day and 36 days a year, will interview pros pective students for the Dickenson Secretarial school. Mr. Watts states that this school is distinctive in that it teaches the A-B-C method of shorthand and restricts the enrollment to suit the needs of the times so that everyone is reasonably sure of employment.

Mr. Zaenglein will remain at home during the summer months. No definite plans have been made by Mr. Bowen.

34 SENIORS PLAN HIGHER EDUCATION

The Red and Black reporter's survey shows that over 40 per cent of the graduating class expect to pusue a higher education.

Those who expect to attend Ohio State university are George Ammer, Carl Boggs, Elizabeth Dowden, Tom Kirwin, Bernice Liston, Otis Mader, Stanley Melvin, Ned Plum, Betty Sayre, and George Speakman.

Kenneth Davis, Dorothy Fausnaugh, Eloise Hatzo, Martha McCrady, Regina Mack, Betty Morris, Howard Richardson, Ethel Stonerock, and Vera Zaenglein are planning to attend Capitol university.

Elsie Brehmer, Joe Bell, Walter Osborn, and Jim Lyle will probably enroll at Ohio University at Athens.

Margie Merz may enter the Chillicothe Business school; Kermit Wilson, the Cincinnat Art school; and Virginia Cady and John Carle, a Business college.

In Lydia Given, Circleville will have its second attendant to Western college for Women.

Marianne Bennett expects to take a course in Medical Technology, while Horace Gilmore will study medicine at the University of Michigan. Kathryn Chalfin and Ernestine Eylar are planning to enter Nurses' Training.

Robert Styers and Robert Teal will take the post-graduate course at C. H. S.

A STATE PARK AT LOGAN ELM

JUST a week or two ago, the late "Billy" Ireland, who was yesterday laid to rest in the cemetery along the banks of his beloved Paint creek in Chillicothe, made a suggestion that the site of the famous Logan Elm be made into a state park. The suggestion was made in "Billy's" famous "Passing Show" page in the Sunday Journal-Dispatch, which is always eagerly read by thousands of his intimate friends.

"Billy" Ireland probably did more than any other individual toward marking and maintaining for posterity Ohio's historic spots, and we would like to see his suggestion carried out and the park dedicated to the memory of "Billy," a good friend and public-spirited citizen, who used his talent for the entertainment and uplifting of mankind.

A SPLENDID RECORD

THE Circleville board of education was able to finish the school year with finances in splendid shape, with salaries and all accumulated bills for operating expenses paid in full. In these strenuous times of financial stringency in both public and private business and industry, it is refreshing to note that the business of operating our greatest institution — our public schools — has been in such capable hands. Members of the board have spent long hours in the laborous task of making both ends meet financially without hinderance to the successful and complete operation of the school system to meet educational requirements, and they are entitled to the commendation of school patrons and taxpayers.

Serving in this capacity with but very little remuneration, these men have performed a great service to the community in their public spiritedness and in their interest in the welfare of the students.

ANOTHER KIDNAPING

AGAINST the background of the almost unfailing success of agencies of law in dealing with kidnapings, the abduction of George Weyerhaeuser, nine years old and heir of a huge lumber fortune, becomes all the more daring and challenging.

Experience has demonstrated that this is a game in which the kidnapers can at best achieve only a temporary success. Weeks, months or even years may pass and it may seem for a time as if every pitfall made by the law has been escaped and every danger has been avoided. But eventually the break comes and the forces of the law vigilant and patient close in from every direction and strike with merciless force.

The presence of Bruno Richard Hauptmann in the death house in New Jersey testifies to the inexorable functioning of the processes of law as also does the history of the Urschel, Bremer, Boettcher, McElroy and other kidnapings.

Ultimately, the kidnapers of the Weyerhaeuser child will be captured and punished. Nevertheless, the status of the case is that of a national tragedy, filled with anxiety and grief for the parents of the stolen children.

VACATION THOUGHTS

AT THIS time of the year this is a nation with but a single thought —vacation.

Memorial Day found vacation time in full swing. And during the succeeding two months a large percentage of the people of the United States will have their annual summer furlough from the cares and labors of making a living.

For some the vacation will be a week, or perhaps only a day. A larger number will drop their tools for fifteen days. A few more fortunate ones will extend their playtime over a month, two months or three months.

The vacation is an all-revealing barometer of prosperity. There is no other country in the world where wage earners and workers for small salaries can afford the luxury of a vacation trip, which is expensive and enjoyed at the additional expense of loss of earnings during the period of absence from work.

American workers are so little the slaves of that machine called industry and business and have so little craving for gold for its own sake that they collectively forfeit hundreds of millions of wage and salary dollars for the sake of a vacation, tour or sojourn.

STORMY LOVE

A YOUNG NAVY MAN'S ROMANCE — by BELLE BURNS GROMER

READ THIS FIRST:

Following a whirlwind romance in Shanghai where he is attached to a U. S. gunboat, carefree Lieutenant Valentine Preston is married to Lia Garenne, an American southerner, whom he first observed while en route to say goodby to Janice Edding, his childhood sweetheart, as she sailed for the Puget Sound Navy Yard where her father, Captain Edding has been assigned. Val left Janice in a huff, ran into Lia again, and learned she was alone in the world except for an aunt in Peiping and a father she had not seen in years who was exploring in the Gobi desert. Their friendship blossomed into love and within a week they were married. When Val's orders arrive, transferring him to Puget Sound Navy Yard, Lia is bitterly disappointed at the thought of leaving China. Brad Norris, a classmate of Val's who has just resigned from the navy to accept a lucrative offer with the Cordray Aviation Co., meets the Prestons at Seattle. At Bremerton Lia joins Brad, his wife, Sue, and some friends of theirs in several drinks, but Val declines. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

Val went forward to meet the Admiral and Mrs. Pomfret.

CHAPTER 16

"DON'T LET Val and his stupid old navy make you into a conscientious conformer," continued Sue, "as Brad would like to have done with me. I do as I please. These stiff old dignitaries at the yard need a bit of stirring up. Show them you don't give a fig for their stupid formality."

"She should give several figs," Val commented dryly. "Don't forget I am still in the service."

"And taking your job very seriously all of a sudden, old darling," Sue jeered. She cocked a malicious eye at him. "Jan Edding will never recognize you in this dignified new role. Don't tell me her efforts to reform you are at last bearing fruit! And by the way, how nice to be meeting Jan again! Or am I wrong? Too bad she is at Mt. Rainier for the last of the winter sports and won't be at the tea."

Lia drained her cup and extended it to be refilled. "Janice Edding? Do you mean the girl who was head over heels in love with Val?" she asked with a lazy smile.

Sue's drowsy calm disappeared. "Oh! I've always suspected as much!" she cried. "Tell me, Lia, did Val confess?"

Val glared at them with outraged eyes. "That was a ridiculous remark," he snapped at Lia.

"Oh, it was not you who mentioned the affair to me, darling," she purred in her sweetest southern voice. "But I heard in Shanghai how I had cut her out and all the rest of it."

Jan Edding had never treated him with anything but the most complete indifference. So far as he knew he had never spoken her name to his wife. And yet here sat Lia mouthing absurdities that made him appear like a damned rotter. His eyes blazed down at her. "You can't say things like that, Lia," he grated. "I won't have it."

Brad stepped into the breach. "Drink up there," he called. "It's time to be shoving off." Then he leaned closer to ask, "Is that the latest in French headgear you're modeling, Madame Preston? It certainly is mighty good looking."

Grateful to Brad for diverting her, Val still burned with an inner fury. Uniform or no uniform, he thought suddenly, he had to have a drink or blow up. He turned to ask Field, "How's it to pour me a cocktail, old chap?"

The broker waved an empty shaker at him. "Should have spoken sooner, lieutenant. But how 'bout some good old bourbon? Warranted to polish the gold braid on your cuffs and make everything hunky-dory for you, sir."

"Pour me one, will you?"

"Listen, Val," Brad leaned across Lia to warn him. "You'll reek to the high heavens if you drink that bourbon. After all, it's your first appearance at the yard. The admiral is dead set against liquor and you might as well watch your step."

"I'll chance it," Val said grimly. He took two stiff drinks before Brad motioned for Sue to close the folding bar and started the car.

It was almost six o'clock when Brad brought the sedan to a stop before the State street gate leading to Officers' Row. As they waited while the two drivers ahead identified themselves to the marine sentry on guard, Val stared out through the windshield. Within this vast enclosure, he reflected, lay a vital part of the navy—the only deep water base on the Pacific coast and the largest industrial plant in the whole northwest. Down on the flats that swept across to the bay, he glimpsed the dim blur of the shops, administration buildings and the great dry docks. Straight before him, on a level shelf that nicked into the hillside, stretched the row of officers' quarters surrounded by trees and rolling lawns. Somewhere over the hill, he remembered dimly, were the marine barracks and the hospital units.

Waiting there at the entrance he realized anew his growing uneasiness. Since naval academy days he had roamed the world, lived gaily, transferred from ship to ship and from port to port. But now, for the next two years, whether he liked it or not, he was under orders to dwell and work within this enclosure. He flinched at the feeling the thought engendered. Why, it was like being trapped! When he passed through this gate, his old happy-go-lucky days were really ended!

But he didn't want them to end!

Suddenly he felt rebellious, uncertain and a little afraid.

The sentry came to the side of the car. When they were free to proceed Lia called excitedly, "Point out our house as we pass. I am simply dying to see it."

"But you aren't in Officers' Row, you know," Sue called from the jump seat. "You don't rate one of those handsome residences, my child. Assistant communications get the small bungalow all by its little self at the top of the hill."

The light faded from Lia's eager face and she sank back with a faint, "Oh!" Mrs. Norris, however, had no compunction in adding to her dismay.

"I'm afraid you'll say 'Oh!' many times when you see your quarters," she commiserated. "I went up with Brad to leave your luggage and I can't say I was impressed, darling. The place is clean, of course, and practical. But be prepared for billous yellow kalsomine, woodwork stained brown and—imagine it!—mission furniture with leather cushions! To top that, the bedrooms have brass beds and red mahogany dressers. Honestly, I'd register a complaint, if I were you. Why, the enlisted personnel must rate as well as that."

"Pipe down, Sue," Brad interrupted, "it isn't nearly so bad as you're making out." He explained to Val, "You are quartered up there by the radio towers so as to be near your office."

Val could feel the tension of Lia's small body pressed close to his. "Of course, we have planned to redecorate the house to suit ourselves," she said with a forced nonchalance. "I am to select whatevah I wish, am I not deah?" she turned pleading eyes to Val for confirmation.

A while ago he had been in a rage at her but now his indignation could not withstand her supplicating glance; and if it occurred to him that her extravagance had almost dissipated his cash surplus, he also remembered that she had been accustomed to gracious rooms and priceless old furniture, and he could not ask his wife to live in such a place as Sue described.

"Of course," he assured her. "Toss out the navy stuff and buy what you like."

When they arrived at the commandant's quarters that stood midway in the line of verandahed white houses, the others descended and went forward but Val waited for Brad who was locking his car. Presently as they turned away together Brad said in a low voice, "I suppose I'm a fool, but it gets me when I pass the sentry and know I no longer rate a salute nor can say, 'Officer's car'."

"If you could still say that you wouldn't be driving a high-powered beauty like this one," Val reminded him.

"No, we can't have everything, I suppose." The half regretful note in the other man's voice caused Val to put a friendly hand on his shoulder.

On the wide porch they found the others in a hilarious state of merriment over Field's attempts to conquer an attack of hiccoughs. When finally they rang for admittance and came into the light and warmth of the old-fashioned, high-ceiled rooms, Val felt a pleasant glow suffuse him. As he went forward with the others to where the Admiral and Mrs. Pomfret waited to greet their guests, he knew that at last the bourbon had taken hold.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA
A MUSICAL FILM
THAT'S THE TOP;
CAST PERFECT!

Choice of "Naughty Marietta," Victor Herbert's classic operetta, as the vehicle for filming the screen's first great musical adventure story, has brought to picture audiences one of the greatest musical works ever composed.

It is at the Cliftona.

Produced on a spectacular scale by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with Jeanette MacDonald, the Sonia of "The Merry Widow" and acknowledged one of the greatest singing stars of the American screen, and Nelson Eddy, American operatic baritone, hailed as a sensational "discovery" among romantic leading men. "Naughty Marietta" was filmed as a thundering drama of the romantic Creole days of St. Louis, a vehicle that gives to the famous Victor Herbert music the importance it merits.

Miss MacDonald plays a princess who masquerades as a casquette girl, and Nelson Eddy a British officer in New Orleans. Their songs are backed by huge symphony orchestras, a chorus of a hundred voices, and many musical novelties fitted into the score by Herbert Stothart, famous American composer and one-time associate of Herbert.

AT THE GRAND

"The Right to Live," Warner Bros. dynamic drama of triangular love under the most unusual circumstances, opens at the Grand Theatre Sunday.

It is the story of two brothers who love the same woman who is the wife of one, a husband, crippled for life [illegible] airplane [illegible] his wife about so that she will not be deprived of all the joys of life.

Love springs up between these two young people from the constant contact, and although they fight against it, nature is too strong for them. The husband, his eyes opened to the situation, makes a sacrifice that is as startling as it is dramatic.

AT THE CIRCLE

The decline of vadueville has brought many famous stage players to pictures. Among them is Sarah Padden who starred for five years on the legitimate stage in a playlet written especially for her, entitled "The Clod."

Miss Padden recently joined Monogram Pictures and is to be seen in the unsympathetic role of Sarah Means in "The Hoosier Schoolmaster," which comes to the Circle Theatre for a run of two days, starting Sunday.

HOLD ON! WE'RE ALL IN THE SAME BOAT

Contract Bridge

By E. V. SHEPARD

APLE OFFENSE WINS GAME

ONE SELDOM looks as powerful a hand as West's, and yet, South bid and made 4-Diamonds doubled. The declarer admitted that he expected to go down two tricks but declarer's able play gave him his doubled contract and game.

The hand is a very interesting one. Look it over. See what you can win against an opening lead of the K of clubs, provided opponents make no mistakes.

	♠ K 9 7 5 4 2 ♥ A 5 ♦ K 5 2 ♣ A 3
♠ A Q J 10 ♥ K Q J 10 ♦ 4 ♣ K Q J 10	W. N. E. S.	♠ 6 3 ♥ 8 7 4 ♦ 10 8 7 6 ♣ 6 5 4 2
	♠ 8 ♥ 9 6 3 2 ♦ A Q J 9 3 ♣ 9 8 7

Win the first trick with dummy's Ace. Lead the 2 of diamonds. Unless the 10 is played second, win with declarer's 9. Lead South's only Spade. It will do West no good to duck. Play the Ace. West may as well win his second trick with the good Q of clubs.

The most natural thing for West to do is to lead his K of hearts. Win with dummy's Ace. Lead the good K of spades and discard one of South's hearts. Lead dummy's last heart, giving West his third defensive trick. Lead anything you please from West's hand. He cannot lead a trump, as his only one went on the second trick. Dummy holds only the K-5 of trumps and four worthless spades. East has the 8 of hearts, two worthless clubs and the 10-8-7 of trumps. South has the 9 of hearts, the A-Q-J-3 of trumps and the 9 of clubs. West has the Q-J of spades, the Q-J of hearts and the J-10 of clubs.

Suppose you lead one of West's good spades, allowing East to discard his last heart. South will trump with his 3. Lead the 9 of clubs. Ruff with dummy's lowest trump. Lead back a spade and ruff with declarer's J. East will discard his last club. Lead the last heart held by South and ruff with the K. East will have to underruff. The last two tricks must go to declarer's A-Q of diamonds, giving him 4-odd doubled.

The first possible variation in defensive play is for West to refuse to win the third trick with his Ace of spades, allowing dummy's K to win. One thing declarer may do is to lead back dummy's last club giving West his first defensive trick. Then the old routine will follow. Dummy will ruff one club and one heart. South will ruff two spades. At the end West will win two heart tricks, instead of one spade trick and one heart trick. South will fulfill his doubled contract. If South plays carefully he cannot be defeated, after the opening lead of the K of clubs.

Lead Particles in Cider Found Source of Poison

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I AM WRITING this in an inn at Plymouth, Devon, England. I have just driven over to Modbury to see the parish church where George Baker's father was vicar.

Dr. Clendening

Plymouth, of course, if of interest to the American visitor to England, for it was the port from which the Mayflower sailed. But for the visitor who has medical interests, Devonshire also has other attractions.

Not only have I visited Modbury today, but I have come down from Exeter through the parish of Alphington. It has been a day of parishes.

For Devonshire, to the medical man, means Devonshire colic, and it was at Alphington that the cause of Devonshire colic was discovered.

This Devon is a country of apples, and from old time people have been proud of their cider. They are bitter rivals of the cider makers of Herefordshire, which lies to the north beyond the Severn.

In 1724 the country began to be afflicted with a curious disease—an epidemical autumn disease, attended with colic, which wore off in the spring. It was supposed to be an infection or epidemic, like typhoid. The great Dr. John Huxham of Plymouth, he who had been called to attend the Queen of Portugal, described it in his treatise on the effect of weather on diseases.

Huxham named it "The Devonshire Colic", but he did not know the cause.

This ignorance continued until Dr. Wall of Worcester suggested to Dr. George Baker, who was born at Modbury in Devon—suggested with a sneer—that the counties of Hereford, Gloucester and Worcester, although neighbors of Devon, were not subject to the colic, and proposed that this Devonshire colic was the same as the colic of Poitou. The colic of Poitou was ascribed by Voltaire's physician to the lead used by the potters of that district to fashion their earthen vessels.

Dr. Wall's idea was that the Devonshire colic was caused by the Devonshire cider because the cider presses in Devon were lined with lead.

Puts Theory to Test

George Baker decided to put this theory to the test of experiment. "Happening to be in the month of October, 1766, at Exeter, I procured some of the expressed juice of apples, as it flowed from a cyder-press, lined with lead, in the parish of Alphington."

He found lead in it, and in other samples of cider from Devon, but none in the cider from Herefordshire.

He published his results. Instead, however, of being thanked for having found the cause of the reproach of his county, he was denounced as a faithless son of Devon.

But the folk of Devon stopped using lead-lined cider presses, and there is no harm in the cider of Devon now.

It was thus we came to know of the nature of lead poisoning and differentiated it from an epidemic disease.

In America, Dr. Cadwalader, of Philadelphia, described a similar epidemic which he called the "West India Dry Gripes". It was later shown to be due to the distillation of rum through leaden pipes. His book was printed by Benjamin Franklin.

Poems That Live

CALUMMY

A whisper woke the air,
A soft, light tone, and low,
Yet barbed with shame and woe,
Ah! might it only perish there,
Nor farther go!

But no! a quick and eager ear
Caught up the little, meaning sound;
Another voice has breathed it clear;
And so it wandered round
From ear to lip, from lip to ear.
Until it reached a gentle heart
That throbbed from all the world apart
And that—it broke!

It was the only heart it found—
The only heart 'twas meant to find,
When first its accents woke.
It reached that gentle heart at last,
And that—it broke!

A STATE PARK AT LOGAN ELM

JUST a week or two ago, the late "Billy" Ireland, who was yesterday laid to rest in the cemetery along the banks of his beloved Paint creek in Chillicothe, made a suggestion that the site of the famous Logan Elm be made into a state park. The suggestion was made in "Billy's" famous "Passing Show" page in the Sunday Journal-Dispatch, which is always eagerly read by thousands of his intimate friends.

"Billy" Ireland probably did more than any other individual toward marking and maintaining for posterity Ohio's historic spots, and we would like to see his suggestion carried out and the park dedicated to the memory of "Billy," a good friend and public-spirited citizen, who used his talent for the entertainment and uplifting of mankind.

VACATION THOUGHTS

AT THIS time of the year this is a nation with but a single thought —vacation.

Memorial Day found vacation time in full swing. And during the succeeding two months a large percentage of the people of the United States will have their annual summer furlough from the cares and labors of making a living.

For some the vacation will be a week, or perhaps only a day. A larger number will drop their tools for fifteen days. A few more fortunate ones will extend their playtime over a month, two months or three months.

The vacation is an all-revealing barometer of prosperity. There is no other country in the world where wage earners and workers for small salaries can afford the luxury of a vacation trip, which is expensive and enjoyed at the additional expense of loss of earnings during the period of absence from work.

American workers are so little the slaves of that machine called industry and business and have so little craving for gold for its own sake that they collectively forfeit hundreds of millions of wage and salary dollars for the sake of a vacation tour or sojourn.

Following a whirlwind romance in Shanghai where he is attached to a U. S. gunboat, carefree Lieutenant Valentine Preston is married to Lia Garenne, an American southerner, whom he first observed while en route to say goodby to Janice Edding, his childhood sweetheart, as she sailed for the Puget Sound Navy Yard where her father, Captain Edding has been assigned. Val left Janice in a huff, ran into Lia again, and learned she was alone in the world except for an aunt in Peiping and a father she had not seen in years who was exploring in the Gobi desert. Their friendship blossomed into love and within a week they were married. When Val's orders arrive, transferring him to Puget Sound Navy Yard, Lia is bitterly disappointed at the thought of leaving China. Brad Norris, a classmate of Val's who has just resigned from the navy to accept a lucrative offer with the Cordray Aviation Co., meets the Prestons at Seattle. At Bremerton Lia joins Brad, his wife, Sue, and some friends of theirs in several drinks, but Val declines. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

Val went forward to meet the Admiral and Mrs. Pomfret.

CHAPTER 16

"DON'T LET Val and his stupid old navy make you into a conscientious conformer," continued Sue, "as Brad would like to have done with me. I do as I please. These stiff old dignitaries at the yard need a bit of stirring up. Show them you don't give a fig for their stupid formality."

"She should give several figs," Val commented dryly. "Don't forget I am still in the service."

"And taking your job very seriously all of a sudden, old darling," Sue jeered. She cocked a malicious eye at him. "Jan Edding will never recognize you in this dignified new role. Don't tell me her efforts to reform you are at last bearing fruit! And by the way, how nice to be meeting Jan again! Or am I wrong? Too bad she is at Mt. Rainier for the last of the winter sports and won't be at the tea."

Lia drained her cup and extended it to be refilled. "Janice Edding? Do you mean the girl who was head over heels in love with Val?" she asked with a lazy smile.

Sue's drowsy calm disappeared. "Oh! I've always suspected as much!" she cried. "Tell me, Lia, did Val confess?"

Val glared at them with outraged eyes. "That was a ridiculous remark," he snapped at Lia.

"Oh, it was not you who mentioned the affair to me, darling," she purred in her sweetest southern voice. "But I heard in Shanghai how I had cut her out and all the rest of it."

Jan Edding had never treated him with anything but the most complete indifference. So far as he knew he had never spoken her name to his wife. And yet here sat Lia mouthing absurdities that made him appear like a damned rotter. His eyes blazed down at her. "You can't say things like that, Lia," he grated. "I won't have it."

Brad stepped into the breach. "Drink up there," he called. "It's time to be shoving off." Then he leaned closer to ask, "Is that the latest in French headgear you're modeling, Madame Preston? It certainly is mighty good looking."

Grateful to Brad for diverting her, Val still burned with an inner fury. Uniform or no uniform, he thought suddenly, he had to have a drink or blow up. He turned to ask Field. "How's it to pour me a cocktail, old chap?"

The broker waved an empty shaker at him. "Should have spoken sooner, lieutenant. But how 'bout some good old bourbon? Warranted to polish the gold braid on your cuffs and make everything hunky-dory for you, sir."

"Pour me one, will you?"

"Listen, Val," Brad leaned across Lia to warn him. "You'll reek to the high heavens if you drink that bourbon. After all, it's your first appearance at the yard. The admiral is dead set against liquor and you might as well watch your step."

"I'll chance it," Val said grimly. He took two stiff drinks before Brad motioned for Sue to close the folding bar and started the car.

It was almost six o'clock when Brad brought the sedan to a stop before the State street gate leading to Officers' Row. As they waited while the two drivers ahead identified themselves to the marine sentry on guard, Val stared out through the windshield. Within this vast enclosure, he reflected, lay a vital part of the navy—the only deep water base on the Pacific coast and the largest industrial plant in the whole northwest. Down on the flats that swept across to the bay, he glimpsed the dim blur of the shops, administration buildings and the great dry docks. Straight before him, on a level shelf that nicked into the hillside, stretched the row of officers' quarters surrounded by trees and rolling lawns. Somewhere over the hill, he remembered dimly, were the marine barracks and the hospital units.

Waiting there at the entrance he realized anew his growing uneasiness. Since naval academy days he had roamed the world, lived gaily, transferred from ship to ship and from port to port. But now, for the next two years, whether he liked it or not, he was under orders to dwell and work within this enclosure. He flinched at the feeling the thought engendered. Why, it was like being trapped! When he passed through this gate, his old happy-go-lucky days were really ended!

But he didn't want them to end!

Suddenly he felt rebellious, uncertain and a little afraid.

The sentry came to the side of the car. When they were free to proceed Lia called excitedly, "Point out our house as we pass. I am simply dying to see it."

"But you aren't in Officers' Row, you know," Sue called from the jump seat. "You don't rate one of these handsome residences, my child. Assistant communications get the small bungalow all by its little self at the top of the hill."

The light faded from Lia's eager face and she sank back with a faint, "Oh!" Mrs. Norris, however, had no compunction in adding to her dismay.

"I'm afraid you'll say 'Oh!' many times when you see your quarters," she commiserated. "I went up with Brad to leave your luggage and I can't say I was impressed, darling. The place is clean, of course, and practical. But be prepared for bilious yellow kalsomine, woodwork stained brown and—imagine it!—mission furniture with leather cushions! To top that, the bedrooms have brass beds and red mahogany dressers. Honestly, I'd register a complaint, if I were you. Why, the enlisted personnel must rate as well as that."

"Pipe down, Sue," Brad interrupted, "it isn't nearly so bad as you're making out." He explained to Val, "You are quartered up there by the radio towers so as to be near your office."

Val could feel the tension of Lia's small body pressed close to his. "Of course, we have planned to redecorate the house to suit ourselves," she said with a forced nonchalance. "I am to select whatevah I wish, am I not deah?" she turned pleading eyes to Val for confirmation.

A while ago he had been in a rage at her but now his indignation could not withstand her supplicating glance; and if it occurred to him that her extravagance had almost dissipated his cash surplus, he also remembered that she had been accustomed to gracious rooms and priceless old furniture, and he could not ask his wife to live in such a place as Sue described.

"Of course," he assured her. "Toss out the navy stuff and buy what you like."

When they arrived at the commandant's quarters that stood midway in the line of verandahed white houses, the others descended and went forward but Val waited for Brad who was locking his car. Presently as they turned away together Brad said in a low voice, "I suppose I'm a fool, but it gets me when I pass the sentry and know I no longer rate a salute nor can say, 'Officer's car'."

"If you could still say that you wouldn't be driving a high-powered beauty like this one," Val reminded him.

"No, we can't have everything, I suppose." The half regretful note in the other man's voice caused Val to put a friendly hand on his shoulder.

On the wide porch they found the others in a hilarious state of merriment over Field's attempts to conquer an attack of hiccoughs. When finally they rang for admittance and came into the light and warmth of the old-fashioned, high-ceiled rooms, Val felt a pleasant glow suffuse him. As he went forward with the others to where the Admiral and Mrs. Pomfret waited to greet their guests, he knew that at last the bourbon had taken hold.

HOLD ON! WE'RE ALL IN THE SAME BOAT

Contract Bridge

By E. V. SHEPARD

ABLE OFFENSE WINS GAME

ONE SELDOM holds as powerful a hand as West's, and yet, South bid and made 4-Diamonds doubled. The declarer admitted that he expected to go down two tricks but declarer's able play gave him his doubled contract and game.

The hand is a very interesting one. Look it over. See what you can win against an opening lead of the K of clubs, provided opponents make no mistakes.

	♠ K 9 7 5 4 2 ♥ A 5 ♦ K 5 2 ♣ A 3
♠ A Q J 10 ♥ K Q J 10 ♦ 4 ♣ K Q J 10	N. W. E. S.	♠ 6 3 ♥ 8 7 4 ♦ 10 8 7 6 ♣ 6 5 4 2
	♠ 8 ♥ 9 6 3 2 ♦ A Q J 9 3 ♣ 9 8 7

Win the first trick with dummy's Ace. Lead the 2 of diamonds. Unless the 10 is played second, win with declarer's 9. Lead South's only Spade. It will do West no good to duck. Play the Ace. West may as well win his second trick with the good Q of clubs.

The most natural thing for West to do is to lead his K of hearts. Win with dummy's Ace. Lead the good K of spades and discard one of South's hearts. Lead dummy's last heart, giving West his third defensive trick. Lead anything you please from West's hand. He cannot lead a trump, as his only one went on the second trick. Dummy holds only the K-5 of trumps and four worthless spades. East has the 8 of hearts, two worthless clubs and the 10-8-7 of trumps. South has the 9 of hearts, the A-Q-J-3 of trumps and the 9 of clubs. West has the Q-J of spades, the Q-J of hearts and the J-10 of clubs.

Suppose you lead one of West's good spades, allowing East to discard his last heart. South will trump with his 3. Lead the 9 of clubs. Ruff with dummy's lowest trump. Lead back a spade and ruff with declarer's J. East will discard his last club. Lead the last heart held by South and ruff with the K. East will have to underruff. The last two tricks must go to declarer's A-Q of diamonds, giving him 4-odd doubled.

The first possible variation in defensive play is for West to refuse to win the third trick with his Ace of spades, allowing dummy's K to win. One thing declarer may do is to lead back dummy's last club, giving West his first defensive trick. Then the old routine will follow. Dummy will ruff one club and one heart. South will ruff two spades. At the end West will win two heart tricks, instead of one spade trick and one heart trick. South will fulfill his doubled contract. If South plays carefully he cannot be defeated, after the opening lead of the K of clubs.

Lead Particles in Cider Found Source of Poison

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I AM WRITING this in an inn at Plymouth, Devon, England. I have just driven over to Modbury to see the parish church where George Baker's father was vicar.

Dr. Clendening

Plymouth, of course, if of interest to the American visitor to England, for it was the port from which the Mayflower sailed. But for the visitor who has medical interests, Devonshire also has other attractions.

Not only have I visited Modbury today, but I have come down from Exeter through the parish of Alphington. It has been a day of parishes.

For Devonshire, to the medical man, means Devonshire colic, and it was at Alphington that the cause of Devonshire colic was discovered.

This Devon is a country of apples, and from old time people have been proud of their cider. They are bitter rivals of the cider makers of Herefordshire, which lies to the north beyond the Severn.

In 1724 the country began to be afflicted with a curious disease—an epidemical autumn disease, attended with colic, which wore off in the spring. It was supposed to be an infection or epidemic, like typhoid. The great Dr. John Huxham of Plymouth, he who had been called to attend the Queen of Portugal, described it in his treatise on the effect of weather on diseases.

Huxham named it "The Devonshire Colic", but he did not know the cause.

This ignorance continued until Dr. Wall of Worcester suggested to Dr. George Baker, who was born at Modbury in Devon—suggested with a sneer—that the counties of Hereford, Gloucester and Worcester, although neighbors of Devon, were not subject to the colic, and proposed that this Devonshire colic was the same as the colic of Poitou. The colic of Poitou was ascribed by Voltaire's physician to the lead used by the potters of that district to fashion their earthen vessels.

Dr. Wall's idea was that the Devonshire colic was caused by the Devonshire cider because the cider presses in Devon were lined with lead.

Puts Theory to Test

George Baker decided to put this theory to the test of experiment. "Happening to be in the month of October, 1766, at Exeter, I procured some of the expressed juice of apples, as it flowed from a cyder-press, lined with lead, in the parish of Alphington."

He found lead in it, and in other samples of cider from Devon, but none in the cider from Herefordshire.

He published his results. Instead, however, of being thanked for having found the cause of the reproach of his county, he was denounced as a faithless son of Devon.

But the folk of Devon stopped using lead-lined cider presses, and there is no harm in the cider of Devon now.

It was thus we came to know of the nature of lead poisoning and differentiated it from an epidemic disease.

In America, Dr. Cadwalader, of Philadelphia, described a similar epidemic which he called the "West India Dry Gripes". It was later shown to be due to the distillation of rum through leaden pipes. His book was printed by Benjamin Franklin.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Six pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

AT THE CLIFTONA
A MUSICAL FILM
THAT'S THE TOP;
CAST PERFECT!

Choice of "Naughty Marietta," Victor Herbert's classic operetta, as the vehicle for filming the screen's first great musical adventure story, has brought to picture audiences one of the greatest musical works ever composed.

It is at the Cliftona.

Produced on a spectacular scale by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with Jeanette MacDonald, the Sonia of "The Merry Widow" and acknowledged one of the greatest singing stars of the American screen, and Nelson Eddy, American operatic baritone, hailed as a sensational "discovery" among romantic leading men. "Naughty Marietta" was filmed as a thundering drama of the romantic Creole days of St. Louis, a vehicle that gives to the famous Victor Herbert music the importance it merits.

Miss MacDonald plays a princess who masquerades as a casquette girl, and Nelson Eddy a British officer in New Orleans. Their songs are backed by huge symphony orchestras, a chorus of a hundred voices, and many musical novelties fitted into the score by Herbert Stothart, famous American composer and one-time associate of Herbert.

AT THE GRAND

"The Right to Live," Warner Bros. dynamic drama of triangular love under the most unusual circumstances, opens at the Grand Theatre Sunday.

It is the story of two brothers who love the same woman who is the wife of one. The husband, crippled for life by an airplane his wife about so that she will not be deprived of all the joys of life.

Love springs up between these two young people from the constant contact, and although they fight against it, nature is too strong for them. The husband, his eyes opened to the situation, makes a sacrifice that is as startling as it is dramatic.

AT THE CIRCLE

The decline of vadueville has brought many famous stage players to pictures. Among them is Sarah Padden who starred for five years on the legitimate stage in a playlet written especially for her, entitled "The Clod."

Miss Padden recently joined Monogram Pictures and is to be seen in the unsympathetic role of Sarah Means in "The Hoosier Schoolmaster," which comes to the Circle Theatre for a run of two days, starting Sunday.

Poems That Live

CALUMMY

A whisper woke the air,
A soft, light tone, and low,
Yet barbed with shame and woe,
Ah! might it only perish there,
Nor farther go!

But no! a quick and eager ear
Caught up the little, meaning sound;
Another voice has breathed it clear;
And so it wandered round
From ear to lip, from lip to ear,
Until it reached a gentle heart
That throbbed from all the world apart
And that—it broke!

It was the only heart it found—
The only heart 'twas meant to find,
When first its accents woke.
It reached that gentle heart at last,
And that—it broke!

—Frances Sargent Osgood.

KINGSTON

Decoration day was fittingly observed at Mt. Pleasant cemetery on Thursday and the program was presented by the Boy Scouts of Troop No. 5, and Scout Master L. E. Hill, assisted by the pastors of of M. E. and Presbyterian churches and a union choir.

Mrs. Sam Kinsey and Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Knost (Dorothy Kinsey) and daughter Charlotte of Portsmouth, O., and their guest Mrs. Nellie Kinsey Cameron of Washington. D. C., were the Decoration day guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Shannon and family.

Mrs. Laura Lindsey of Columbus was the guest of her sister, Miss Jennie Wood and brother, W. D. Wood and family a few days this week.

Mr. and Mrs. James Baker and son Charles of Cincinnati were the guests of his mother Mrs. Fannie Baker a few days this week. Their son James, who has been attending school in Kingston the past year will accompany them back home.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Walsheimer of Buffalo N. Y., were the Decoration day guests of relatives.

Mrs. Lemuel E. Brundige of Miami Florida, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Brundige from Wednesday until Friday. Miss Laura Brundige of Columbus enjoyed the same time with Mr. and Mrs. David McCorkle.

Bridge Luncheon

Mrs. S. C. Lightner delightfully entertained a number of her friends on Saturday at one o'clock. The guests enjoyed a three course luncheon at the party home of Mrs. Ada Dresbach, after which they repaired to the home of Dr. and Mrs. Lightner where the afternoon was enjoyed in the ever fascinating game of Bridge at six tables.

The home was gaily decorated with baskets and bowls of Spring flowers. On counting scores at the conclusion of the playing it was found that Mrs. William McGinnis held highest score and Mrs. Albert Maag next highest. They received first and second trophies, respectively.

The invited guests were Mrs. Renick W. Dunlap, Mrs. William McGinnis, Mrs. May McCullough, Mrs. Russell E. Lightner, Mrs. J. P. Gardner, Mrs. Dennis H. Dreisbach, Mrs. Robert Cryder, Mrs. Herbert H. Snyder, Mrs. Jane Leist, Mrs. J. H. LeMar; Mrs. Edgar Hassenpflu, Mrs. James Mattison and Misses Margaret Thomas, Marie Snyder, Mildred Holderman, Emma Lou Leasure, and Margaret Cryder.

Out of town guests were Miss Marie Hamilton, Mrs. Orion King, Mrs. G. L. Schlear, Mrs. Ella Hornbeck, Mrs. George Corna, Mrs. Glen Nickerson, Mrs. Floyd Hook and Mrs. Paul Johnson, all of Circleville, Mrs. Harry B. Newman of Hominy, Okla., and Mrs. Albert Maag of Hallsville.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Phillips, alter attended commencement exercises at Pickaway Centralized school.

Mrs. C. C. Price of Dayton was the weekend guest of her sister Mrs. T. J. Evans and family.

Mrs. Samuel Hettinger visited with her daughter Althea Jane, student nurse at Children's Hospital in Columbus, Friday and Saturday.

Miss Gladys Beavers of Columbus came to attend the commencement exercises at Kingston high school on Thursday evening.

The regular meeting of the Philathea Sunday school class of the M. E. church will meet on Friday afternoon, May 31, at 2:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Emma Miller. The day was changed from Thursday on account of Decoration. A good attendance is desired.

Miss Helen Beavers of Carrol, O., was the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Beavers and family last week and attended commencement exercises on Thursday evening.

J. W. Banks of Columbus, O. has come to make his home with Mr. and Mrs. David Parker and family.

John Rittenour and family entertained on Sunday at a twelve o'clock dinner the following guests, Rev .and Mrs. Niswander and children, Donald Gene and Patty and Mr .and Mrs. Dennis H. Dreisbach.

Mrs. Cecil Bower's friends will be sorry to hear of her recent illness.

Mrs. Luella Brundige's friends will be glad to hear that she is improving from her recent accident when she fractured her left leg near the hip.

Misses Ireta Beaty and Zelpha Crites of Stoutsville are the guests of Mr .and Mrs. Joseph Butts and family.

The Grade School teachers enjoyed a picnic at Mound City on Friday evening. In the group were, Mr. and Mrs. A. Dane Ellis, Mrs. Emma May, Mrs. Shirley Gearhart and Misses Ada B. Merriman, Mary Ford and Margaret Thomas.

Mrs. Farrel Briggs and family of Franklin, O., are the guests of Mrs. Bertha Krafthefer this week.

Mr. Dayton Steele and son Robert of Columbus were the weekend guests of Mrs. Lavina Steele and family.

Miss Lettie Brundige of Johns Hopkins hospital, Baltimore, Md., arrived on Wednesday for an extended visit with her mother, Mrs. Luella Brundige and family.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear son, John Virgil Johnson, who died one year ago today, June 1, 1934.

One year has passed our hearts are sore,
As time rolls on we miss him more.
His memory is as dear today
As at the time he passed away,
When the evening shadows are falling
And we are all alone
In our hearts there comes a longing
If he only could come home
Our loving son so true and kind
No friend on earth like him will find
For all of us he did his best
Dear God grant him eternal rest.
Mr. and Mrs. John D. Johnson and son.

Even FDR Couldn't Get Copy of NRA Decree from Clerk

WASHINGTON — Despite the fact that the NRA decision was awaited as the most momentous of the year, Supreme Court attaches did not have extra copies of the ruling. So when the White House, an hour after the decision was rendered, sent a messenger to obtain a copy, the clerk of the court had none available. This is not the first time in recent months that attaches of the court have bungled the handling of an important decision, and caused the suggestion that the august tribunal emulate the rest of the New Deal and hire a publicity man . . . Tennessee Valley farmers who are cooking with electricity are going to have nothing on the White House. The kitchen of that historic mansion soon is to be completely overhauled and the last word in electrical cooking equipment installed. Cooking at present is done by gas, originally installed in 1878 . . . North Carolina's ingratiating Senator Bob Reynolds is an ardent auto fan, has toured most of the county by car. He is the author of two travel books, "Wanderlust" and "Gypsy Trails."

Rhode Island's wispy little Senator Metcalf was greeted by a newsman with the remark: "What do you know?" Metcalf retorted: "I've just been reading your newspaper and you don't seem to know very much" . . . RFC Chairman Jesse Jones, who is recovering from a case of shingles, tells friends that if he had a choice between the ailment and the 1933 bank holiday he would take the latter . . . South Carolina's Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith is a strong foe of radicals—particularly of the Brain Trust type—but that is not keeping him from sporting a large, bright red necktie . . . Although White House mail has fallen off appreciably in recent months it still requires a staff of 150 clerks to handle the inflow and outgo . . . Officials of the Federal Housing Administration hastily put a halt to a chain-letter scheme which they discovered in full swing among clerks of the agency . . . There are thirty members of the House, 12 of them Republicans, who have served more than twenty years in the chamber.

Household Arts

PATTERN 5369 PATTERN 5370

Some people think everything that grows wild is a weed. But the person who knows and loves flowers and the artist know that many of our wild flowers are exceptionally lovely. Fringed gentian—columbine—lupine—aster to mention but a few—what a riot of color they present—what beauty of form. In these patterns Alice Brooks has collected some choice wild flower sprays. You'll enjoy embroidering them in their true coloring on household linens. A lovely teacloth with a different spray at each corner and one in the center of each edge—a bedspread with sprays in alternate squares—these will add greatly to the decorativeness of your home. You can make each spray on a separate square if you wish and join these into scarfs, tea cloths and bedspreads. This makes practical pick-up work. The pattern contains a pattern for a patch piece to cover the seams of the squares. It gives the effect of a twisted ribbon as shown. You can, of course, omit this if you wish. There are six different sprays in each pattern. One pattern will make a variety of articles; two patterns are needed for larger linens and bedspreads.

In pattern 5369 you will find a transfer pattern of six sprays averaging 6x8 inches and a pattern piece for the ribbon effect; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches needed; color suggestions. Price of pattern 10 cents.

In pattern 5370 you will find a transfer pattern of six sprays averaging 6x8 inches and a pattern piece for the ribbon effect; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches needed; color suggestions. Price of pattern 10 cents.

To obtain these patterns send 10 cents each in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Herald Household Arts Dept., 124 W. Main St., Circleville, O.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear son, John Virgil Johnson, who died one year ago today, June 1, 1934.

One year has passed our hearts are sore,
As time rolls on we miss him more.
His memory is as dear today
As the time he passed away,
When the evening shadows are falling
And we are all alone
In our hearts there comes a longing
If he only could come home
Our loving son so true and kind
No friend on earth like him will find
For all of us he did his best
Dear God grant him eternal rest.

OILS DEFEAT SPECIALS IN 22-11 GAME

Sew Up Game in Fifth Inning After Jones' Team Takes Early Margin.

Slamming out 22 hits for 35 bases the Circleville Oils entered the victory column in the recreation ball league Friday evening defeating the Jones Specials. The score, 22 to 11, resembles a track meet more than it does a soft ball contest.

The Specials started the ball rolling in the first inning by driving Joe Barnes' offerings all over the field for four markers. The Oils went ahead in their half of the frame when six were scored, Maloney smacking a home run.

The Specials took a one run lead in the second by tallying three more and counted another brace in the third session with the Oils cutting the lead by one in the same inning.

Butlers' Blow Helps

With the score 10 to 7 against them the Oils scored seven runs in the fifth frame with Butler's home run the big blow. They added five more in the sixth and three in the eighth while the final Special run was chalked up in the seventh.

The Specials hit the Oil pitchers, Barnes and Maloney, often totalling 14 Maloney hurled after the first inning.

Tag Strawser, who did a nice job at third base for the Oils, clubbed out five base hits including two doubles and walked in six trips to the rubber. B. Radcliff, Barnes and D. Robinson each hit safely three times. The play of Whaley at shortstop was also brilliant, the infielder once going back of second to take a well hit ball and whip the oval to first in time for the put out.

The umpires were Sherman Barr and Frank Lynch.

GAINES, MOATS MEET IN RING

Aronson Announces 150 Pound Boys as Principals For Thursday Card.

Norman Aronson today announced the personnel of his fight card to be staged in Scippo park next Thursday.

The card will be the third sponsored by Aronson in the park on the Scioto trail. He is hoping for a large crowd.

The main go will find two mighty good battlers. Willie Gaines, Ohio National guard glove-wielder, and Herschel 'Kid' Moats, tangling at 150 pounds.

Both Gaines and Moats love to fight and both can give it and take it. They promise to go an interesting three rounds.

The semifinal will bring together Merle Davis and Chuck Jackson at 137 pounds, and Howard Conley and George 'Ike' Davis have been booked for the second preliminary. These boys weigh 165.

The curtain-raiser, which also should be interesting, will find Joe Moore and Jack Barkens wearing the tights. The boys each weigh 170 pounds.

MARIETTA FETE DRAWING THRONG

MARIETTA, June 1.—The "Old man river" rolled peacefully by Marietta today while hundreds of old grads, their friends and their friend's friends thronged into town to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the founding of Marietta College and to watch this year's crew race this afternoon in the annual two-mile mid-Atlantic regatta.

Marietta was gaily bedecked in flags and bunting for today's celebration. Hilarity and good cheer reigned as the returning grads back-slapped each other and got together to reminisce.

The climax of the day's program was scheduled at 5:15 o'clock this afternoon when six college crews were scheduled to flash down a two-mile stretch of the Ohio river for the Charles G. Dawes trophy, donated by the former vice president of the United States who graduated from Marietta in the class of 1884.

The elaborately-planned program for the regatta was jarred yesterday when Wisconsin lost its racing shell near Elgin, Ill., as it was being transported aboard a specially-rigged automobile trailer. The shell was completely wrecked.

Undaunted by the accident, the eight Wisconsin crew members came on to Marietta while University of Pennsylvania authorities, after being notified, arranged for the shipping of an extra shell for Wisconsin.

The jingle "A bushel a day is the price we pay for planting corn after the middle of May" bears up under scientific scrutiny. Over a 20-year period at the Ohio Experiment Station, corn planted at 10-day intervals yielded as follows: April 29, 62 bushels; May 7, 65 bushels; May 17, 64 bushels; May 27, 59 bushels; June 6, 46 bushels, and June 13, 37 bushels.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

What of New York?

The big question is: "Who is going to stop the New York Giants?"—The Terrymen are now five and one-half games in the lead in the National league and show signs of adding to that margin instead of losing any of it—Terry's hurlers are coming through in great style with Bud Parmelee almost replacing Carl Hubbell as No. 1 man in the staff—Young Clydell Castleman, rookie right hander, has yet to taste defeat **

* * *

On Bradley's Lap

The Cleveland situation is right back in Prexy Alva Bradley's lap today with Commissioner Landis ruling that is where it belongs—Landis heard Willie Kamm and Manager Walter Johnson Friday, and said it was a matter for the Cleveland owner to decide—Rumor is rife concerning the outcome; if Bradley leaves it up to Cleveland fans, and after all they are the guys who pay the freight, Johnson will be out—The natural turn then would be to name Kamm as manager * * *

* * *

Chain in Difficulty

The St. Louis Cardinal chain, by the way, is experiencing a tough year generally—The four major teams in the organization, the Cardinals, the Red Birds, Rochester and Houston are all battling but finding the going tough—St. Louis is in second place five and one-half games behind the Giants; the Birds are buried in second division and so is Rochester, while Houston is in the fifth spot * * *

* * *

Four Columbus castoffs were in the Indianapolis lineup, Friday, that so easily defeated the Birdies—They were Bluege, Heath, Bedore and Sprinz * * *

NEW MANAGER FOR "INDIANS" THOUGHT NEAR

Kamm Fired By Bradley After Conference With Landis; Johnson on Way.

CHICAGO, June 1—Out of the lively Willie Kamm-Walter Johnson controversy, dubbed as purely a family squabble by baseball Commisioner Kenesaw Landis, today came reports that the Cleveland Indians will shortly have a new manager.

Just who President Alva Bradley may choose to guide the footsteps of the third place Indians in the place of Johnson was a matter of lively conjecture, but all the gossip pointed to a change in regime by July 4 or thereabouts.

O'Neill Considered

All who would venture an opinion following the two-hour conference between Manager Johnson, ex-infielder Kamm and Commissioner Landis here declared that Steve O'Neil, the capable University of Indiana mentor, is being seriously considered as Johnson's successor.

Another who has attracted the eye of President Bradley in his present dilemma is Gabby Hartnett, veteran catcher of the Chicago Cubs. Bill McKechnie's name too, came into the picture today as a possible aspirant.

Commissioner Landis, in effect, sidestepped the whole controvery and sent it right back to Bradley, who has some 50,000 irate Cleveland fans howling on his doorstep for Johnson's scalp. Landis gave both Kamm and Johnson a clean bill, but ruled that Johnson as manager had the right to fire Kamm or any other ball player on his club. The commissioner added that Bradley can settle any disputes between manager and player, if he wishes.

Back to Bradley

So the squabble that President Bradley tried to push into Commissioner Landis' jurisdiction for settlement was sent right back to Bradley.

That something has to be done within the Indians' family, even with Kamm banished, seemed apparent today to those who would comment. The outraged fans of Cleveland are demanding action after the rough treatment accorded their hero, Kamm.

Bradley's first move after the conference was to announce the unconditional release of Kamm, whom Johnson sent home from Boston with catcher Glenn Myatt.

REDS LOSE 1 TO 4

CINCINNATI, June 1—In an elaborate setting beneath gigantic floodlights, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh crossed bats at Crosley field here last night before a paid attendance of 19,429 persons.

The game, celebrating "Kentucky Night," was the second night game in major league baseball history. It was marked with the commissioning of Manager Charley Dressen of the Cincinnati Reds, as a Kentucky Colonel during a ceremony of flashing fireworks and exploding bombs.

Pittsburgh took to night baseball like veterans and snapped off a 4 to 1 victory over the Reds, scoring in the first three innings and again in the eighth. Cincinnati's lone tally came in the first frame by Riggs. After getting a safe hit, Riggs was pushed across the home plate by an error and a single by Campbell.

GOLF FACTS

Number 627

ALEX MORRISON says:

Abe Lyman, popular band leader, is quite a golfer. At dinner recently we were, as usual, talking golf. Most of the talk was about the particularly good shots each player had made. It led to the question, "What's your best shot?"

Such a question is a sure sign that a player hasn't a well-rounded game. He may be very good with certain shots, likewise very much at a loss when it comes to playing others. This means that he can play well only under certain conditions or over a few courses.

Many players seem content to have a game like this. Even if you can hit a long ball off the tee it doesn't mean that your short game is good or vice versa. One good shot wont keep you out in front.

STORMY LOVE

READ THIS FIRST:

Following a whirlwind romance in Shanghai where he is attached to a U. S. gunboat, carefree Lieutenant Valentine Preston is married to Lia Garenne, an American southerner, whom he first observed while en route to say goodby to Janice Edding, his childhood sweetheart, as she sailed for the Puget Sound Navy Yard where her father, Captain Edding has been assigned. Val left Janice in a huff, ran into Lia again, and learned she was alone in the world except for an aunt in Peiping and a father she had not seen in years who was exploring in the Gobi desert. Their friendship blossomed into love and within a week they were married. When Val's orders arrive, transferring him to Puget Sound Navy Yard, Lia is bitterly disappointed at the thought of leaving China. Brad Norris, a classmate of Val's who has just resigned from the navy to accept a lucrative offer with the Cordray Aviation Co., meets the Prestons at Seattle. At Bremerton Lia joins Brad, his wife, Sue, and some friends of theirs in several drinks, but Val declines. On the way to the commandant's reception, Val finally takes a drink and the party stops at Officers' Row to inspect the Prestons' new home. Finally they arrive at the reception in gay spirits.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 17

THE ADMIRAL was a kindly looking gentleman with blue, seaspent eyes and the deeply lined face of a benign old setter. He had been commandant of midshipmen during Val's academy days and when the young officer vigorously pumped his arm up and down and assured him what a pleasure it was going to be to serve under him here, the senior stared with a quizzical quirk in one bushy eyebrow.

Mrs. Pomfret—one of an old and famous American family—was a dumpy lady with faded red hair and small bright eyes. She looked, Val thought, like a delightfully pugnacious little old sailor disguised in a velvet frock. When he was presented to her he said, "Mrs. Pomfret, the messenger boy has the honor to report. If ever you need errands run, send for assistant communications. Except," he favored her with his most ingratiating smile, "don't ask me to furnish my own bicycle."

She held his hand for a moment and studied him with keen, shoe-button eyes. "Young man," she finally said, "I knew your father well. And so I am not going to take you at your own valuation just yet."

Now what had she meant by that, he wondered. As he moved on into the drawing room he noted that Lia had fallen behind with Brad. Sue at his elbow hissed, "Did you see the admiral give Jack Field the fish-eye because Jack is feeling his cocktails a bit? Oh, this navy crowd makes me sick! Jack could buy and sell every one in the place if he liked."

"But what would he do with an admiral after he'd bought him, sweetheart?" Val asked absently and gazed about him at the pleasant homeliness of book-filled shelves, softly faded brocades, flowers from the garden, and—souvenirs of the Pomfret's tours of foreign duty—many signed photographs of ladies with court trains and gentlemen in brilliant uniforms with numberless decorations.

All about him he heard the modulated voices of nice looking people who, Sue informed him, were the yard officers and their families, officers from the various ships here under repair, and a few civilians from Bremerton and Seattle. Two men he had previously known stopped to greet him: Cromwell, now a junior captain, and Lieutenant Commander Linbury, the district communication officer and Val's new boss. After a moment's conversation with each of these officers, the younger man was conscious of a knowing expression that dawned in their eyes. Linbury even said, "The last time we met you were celebrating in the American club bar in Shanghai, Preston. Still in training, I see."

His senior moved away and Val grinned wryly to reflect that his new boss thought him tight. For that matter, so had the admiral. Well, despite the odorous bourbon, it took more than two drinks to turn that trick. But wasn't it just his luck to make his first appearance at a cold-sober party with a gang who couldn't hold its liquor and was obvious about it? He turned to regard Field who stood beside him trying to focus his eyes on a critical lady to whom he had just been presented and across whose frock he had already spilled half his cup of tea. From close at hand came Mona Browne's shrill giggle and her sister's high-pitched voice saying, "I feel as if I sort of belong with the navy. I have an uncle who was a major in some war or other."

As he turned a bored shoulder toward this group he caught sight of Lia who was poised on the first stair landing in the entrance hall. A hand on one slim hip pushed back her coat to reveal a trim frock of lipstick red. Her little face was tipped up like a creamy poppy to the sun, and she was in animated conversation with a tall stranger whose back was toward Val.

When the man shifted his position Val was curious enough to ask Sue his name. Brad's wife stared over her shoulder in the direction he indicated. After a moment she uttered a strange, mirthless laugh. "Trust Lia to manage that as quickly as possible," she murmured. "That, Val dear, is Maurice Cordray."

So this was Brad's boss, Cordray! A rather magnificent person with coin yellow hair and—good Lord—a curly golden beard! The man was faultlessly tailored and groomed but the whiskers shouted for coat-of-mail and a tin helmet with dinky wings on either side. "Don't kid me, beautiful," Val said to Sue. "That's a German boy named Siegfried. What'll you bet he doesn't burst into a horn call before the party is over."

"Don't be fantastic," Sue frowned. "His father was a Belgian, his mother a Swede, but he was born here in Bremerton. He lived abroad a lot until his father's death two years ago. He is very rich, Val, with important holdings in this northwest country. But he likes best to work in his studio where he fashions all manner of lovely hand-wrought stuff—jewelry, puppets, masks—things like that."

"Don't tell me he plays a flute when I expected a trumpet." His eyes danced with laughter.

"Don't ever doubt that Maurice Cordray is a trumpet man." Sue's languorous voice warmed. "He is an expert boxer, a business man and an artist. His passion is to create beautiful, unusual things. But he makes his hobbies pay just as he makes his investments yield. Brad says his special talent in business affairs lies in his ability to select his executives, then let them do the work. And the proof of his success is that he has greatly increased the fortune his father passed on to him."

"I suppose he plays about with the yard crowd."

Sue looked away. "Y-e-s, he is beginning to come to the yard again—" she broke off abruptly.

Her manner aroused his curiosity. "What stopped him?"

"Oh, there was a silly misunderstanding. That idiot Tony Eastman made a spectacle of himself because Cordray was merely pleasant to his wife. Truly, Val, it was the greatest injustice because Cordray is charming to all the girls and was only being friendly. I'll wager the whole navy set was disgusted with Tony for driving this man away, for without him this is the dullest place imaginable. How they must thank their lucky stars that little imbecile Eastman has gone to sea duty and Cordray is giving his lovely parties and coming to the yard again."

Sue turned away to speak to Mrs. Field, and Val stood idly watching Lia and her new acquaintance. For some time he had been half-conscious of music coming from the hidden angle of the adjoining room and now a girl's soft contralto began to sing a well remembered air. Suddenly he stiffened. That song—an old poem of Stevenson's—was as well known to him as his own name. Listening intently, only his eyes moved. There was an odd shiver along his spine, his arms tingled, but he seemed powerless to stir.

"Dark brown is the river, golden is the sand,
It flows along forever with trees on either hand,
Green leaves a-floating, castles on the foam,
Boats of mine a-boating, when will you come home——"

Only one person could sing it like that. Suddenly, heedless of the crowd, he pressed toward the music room. When he finally reached the doorway he saw that he was right. It was Jan. Oh Jan, God bless you, honey! He had known just how she'd be poised there by the piano, clear-eyed and young, her hands clasped behind her, chin lifted, the thick golden waves of hair brushed back carelessly to disclose the lovely line of her forehead. That pale green frock with her yellow hair made her look like a jonquil in spring.

"On goes the river and out past the mill,
Away down the valley, away down the hill——"

That funny old kid song! He had played it for her a thousand times while they chanted it together——

"Away down the river, a hundred miles or more
Other little children shall bring my boats ashore,
Shall bring my——"

S DEFEAT SPECIALS IN 22-11 GAME

Blow Up Game in Fifth Inning After Jones' Team Takes Early Margin.

Slamming out 22 hits for 35 bases the Circleville Oils entered the victory column in the recreation ball league Friday evening defeating the Jones Specials. The score, 22 to 11, resembles a track meet more than it does a soft ball contest.

The Specials started the ball rolling in the first inning by driving Joe Barnes' offerings all over the field for four markers. The Oils went ahead in their half of the frame when six were scored, Maloney smacking a home run.

The Specials took a one run lead in the second by tallying three more and counted another brace in the third session with the Oils cutting the lead by one in the same inning.

Butlers' Blow Helps

With the score 10 to 7 against them the Oils scored seven runs in the fifth frame with Butler's home run the big blow. They added five more in the sixth and three in the eighth while the final Special run was chalked up in the seventh.

The Specials hit the Oil pitchers, Barnes and Maloney, often totalling 14. Maloney hurled after the first inning.

Tag Strawser, who did a nice job at third base for the Oils, clubbed out five base hits including two doubles and walked in six trips to the rubber. B. Radcliff, Barnes and D. Robinson each hit safely three times. The play of Whaley at shortstop was also brilliant, the infielder once going back of second to take a well hit ball and whip the oval to first in time for the put out.

The umpires were Sherman Barr and Frank Lynch.

GAINES, MOATS MEET IN RING

Aronson Announces 150 Pound Boys as Principals For Thursday Card.

Norman Aronson today announced the personnel of his fight card to be staged in Scippo park next Thursday.

The card will be the third sponsored by Aronson in the park on the Scioto trail. He is hoping for a large crowd.

The main go will find two mighty good battlers. Willie Gaines, Ohio National guard glove-wielder, and Herschel 'Kid' Moats, tangling at 150 pounds.

Both Gaines and Moats love to fight and both can give it and take it. They promise to go an interesting three rounds.

The semifinal will bring together Merle Davis and Chuck Jackson at 137 pounds, and Howard Conley and George 'Ike' Davis have been booked for the second preliminary. These boys weigh 165.

The curtain-raiser, which also should be interesting, will find Joe Moore and Jack Barkens wearing the tights. The boys each weigh 170 pounds.

MARIETTA FETE DRAWING THRONG

MARIETTA, June 1.—The "Old man river" rolled peacefully by Marietta today while hundreds of old grads, their friends and their friend's friends thronged into town to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the founding of Marietta College and to watch this year's crew race this afternoon in the annual two-mile mid-Atlantic regatta.

Marietta was gaily bedecked in flags and bunting for today's celebration. Hilarity and good cheer reigned as the returning grads back-slapped each other and got together to reminisce.

The climax of the day's program was scheduled at 5:15 o'clock this afternoon when six college crews were scheduled to flash down a two-mile stretch of the Ohio river for the Charles G. Dawes trophy, donated by the former vice president of the United States who graduated from Marietta in the class of 1884.

The elaborately-planned program for the regatta was jarred yesterday when Wisconsin lost its racing shell near Elgin, Ill., as it was being transported aboard a specially-rigged automobile trailer. The shell was completely wrecked.

Undaunted by the accident, the eight Wisconsin crew members came on to Marietta while University of Pennsylvania authorities, after being notified, arranged for the shipping of an extra shell for Wisconsin.

The jingle "A bushel a day is the price we pay for planting corn after the middle of May" bears up under scientific scrutiny. Over a 20-year period at the Ohio Experiment Station, corn planted at 10-day intervals yielded as follows: April 29, 62 bushels; May 7, 65 bushels; May 17, 64 bushels; May 27, 59 bushels; June 6, 46 bushels, and June 18, 27 bushels.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

What of New York?

The big question is: "Who is going to stop the New York Giants?"—The Terrymen are now five and one-half games in the lead in the National league and show signs of adding to that margin instead of losing any of it—Terry's hurlers are coming through in great style with Bud Parmelee almost replacing Carl Hubbell as No. 1 man in the staff—Young Clydell Castleman, rookie right hander, has yet to taste defeat ** * *

On Bradley's Lap

The Cleveland situation is right back in Prexy Alva Bradley's lap today with Commissioner Landis ruling that is where it belongs—Landis heard Willie Kamm and Manager Walter Johnson Friday, and said it was a matter for the Cleveland owner to decide—Rumor is rife concerning the outcome; if Bradley leaves it up to Cleveland fans, and after all they are the guys who pay the freight, Johnson will be out—The natural turn then would be to name Kamm as manager * * *

Chain in Difficulty

The St. Louis Cardinal chain, by the way, is experiencing a tough year generally—The four major teams in the organization, the Cardinals, the Red Birds, Rochester and Houston are all battling but finding the going tough—St. Louis is in second place five and one-half games behind the Giants; the Birds are buried in second division and so is Rochester, while Houston is in the fifth spot * * *

Four Columbus castoffs were in the Indianapolis lineup, Friday, that so easily defeated the Birdies—They were Bluege, Heath, Bedore and Sprinz * * *

NEW MANAGER FOR "INDIANS" THOUGHT NEAR

Kamm Fired By Bradley After Conference With Landis; Johnson on Way.

CHICAGO, June 1—Out of the lively Willie Kamm-Walter Johnson controversy, dubbed as purely a family squabble by baseball Commisioner Kenesaw Landis, today came reports that the Cleveland Indians will shortly have a new manager.

All who would venture an opinion following the two-hour conference between Manager Johnson, ex-infielder Kamm and Commissioner Landis here declared that Steve O'Neil, the capable University of Indiana mentor, is being seriously considered as Johnson's successor.

Another who has attracted the eye of President Bradley in his present dilemma is Gabby Hartnett, veteran catcher of the Chicago Cubs. Bill McKechnie's name too, came into the picture today as a possible aspirant.

Commissioner Landis, in effect, sidestepped the whole controvery and sent it right back to Bradley, who has some 50,000 irate Cleveland fans howling on his doorstep for Johnson's scalp. Landis gave both Kamm and Johnson a clean bill, but ruled that Johnson as manager had the right to fire Kamm or any other ball player on his club. The commissioner added that Bradley can settle any disputes between manager and player, if he wishes.

Back to Bradley

So the squabble that President Bradley tried to push into Commissioner Landis' jurisdiction for settlement was sent right back to Bradley.

That something has to be done within the Indians' family, even with Kamm banished, seemed apparent today to those who would comment. The outraged fans of Cleveland are demanding action after the rough treatment accorded their hero, Kamm.

Bradley's first move after the conference was to announce the unconditional release of Kamm, whom Johnson sent home from Boston with catcher Glenn Myatt.

REDS LOSE 1 TO 4

CINCINNATI, June 1—In an elaborate setting beneath gigantic floodlights, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh crossed bats at Crosley field here last night before a paid attendance of 19,429 persons.

The game, celebrating "Kentucky Night," was the second night game in major league baseball history. It was marked with the commissioning of Manager Charley Dressen of the Cincinnati Reds, as a Kentucky Colonel during a ceremony of flashing fireworks and exploding bombs.

Pittsburgh took to night baseball like veterans and snapped off a 4 to 1 victory over the Reds, scoring in the first three innings and again in the eighth. Cincinnati's lone tally came in the first frame by Riggs. After getting a safe hit, Riggs was pushed across the home plate by an error and a single by Campbell.

GOLF FACTS

Number 627

ALEX MORRISON says:

Abe Lyman, popular band leader, is quite a golfer. At dinner recently we were, as usual, talking golf. Most of the talk was about the particularly good shots each player had made. It led to the question, "What's your best shot?"

Such a question is a sure sign that a player hasn't a well-rounded game. He may be very good with certain shots, likewise very much at a loss when it comes to playing others. This means that he can play well only under certain conditions or over a few courses.

Many players seem content to have a game like this. Even if you can hit a long ball off the tee it doesn't mean that your short game is good or vice versa. One good shot wont keep you out in front.

READ THIS FIRST:

Following a whirlwind romance in Shanghai where he is attached to a U. S. gunboat, carefree Lieutenant Valentine Preston is married to Lia Garenne, an American southerner, whom he first observed while en route to say goodby to Janice Edding, his childhood sweetheart, as she sailed for the Puget Sound Navy Yard where her father, Captain Edding has been assigned. Val left Janice in a huff, ran into Lia again, and learned she was alone in the world except for an aunt in Peiping and a father she had not seen in years who was exploring in the Gobi desert. Their friendship blossomed into love and within a week they were married. When Val's orders arrive, transferring him to Puget Sound Navy Yard, Lia is bitterly disappointed at the thought of leaving China. Brad Norris, a classmate of Val's who has just resigned from the navy to accept a lucrative offer with the Cordray Aviation Co., meets the Prestons at Seattle. At Bremerton Lia joins Brad, his wife, Sue, and some friends of theirs in several drinks, but Val declines. On the way to the commandant's reception, Val finally takes a drink and the party stops at Officers' Row to inspect the Prestons' new home. Finally they arrive at the reception in gay spirits.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 17

THE ADMIRAL was a kindly looking gentleman with blue, sea-spent eyes and the deeply lined face of a benign old setter. He had been commandant of midshipmen during Val's academy days and when the young officer vigorously pumped his arm up and down and assured him what a pleasure it was going to be to serve under him here, the senior stared with a quizzical quirk in one bushy eyebrow.

Mrs. Pomfret—one of an old and famous American family—was a dumpy lady with faded red hair and small bright eyes. She looked, Val thought, like a delightfully pugnacious little old sailor disguised in a velvet frock. When he was presented to her he said, "Mrs. Pomfret, the messenger boy has the honor to report. If ever you need errands run, send for assistant communications. Except," he favored her with his most ingratiating smile, "don't ask me to furnish my own bicycle."

She held his hand for a moment and studied him with keen, shoe-button eyes. "Young man," she finally said, "I knew your father well. And so I am not going to take you at your own valuation just yet."

Now what had she meant by that, he wondered. As he moved on into the drawing room he noted that Lia had fallen behind with Brad. Sue at his elbow hissed, "Did you see the admiral give Jack Field the fish-eye because Jack is feeling his cocktails a bit? Oh, this navy crowd makes me sick! Jack could buy and sell every one in the place if he liked."

"But what would he do with an admiral after he'd bought him, sweetheart?" Val asked absently and gazed about him at the pleasant homeliness of book-filled shelves, softly faded brocades, flowers from the garden, and—souvenirs of the Pomfret's tours of foreign duty—like that."

many signed photographs of ladies with court trains and gentlemen in brilliant uniforms with numberless decorations.

All about him he heard the modulated voices of nice looking people who, Sue informed him, were the yard officers and their families, officers from the various ships here under repair, and a few civilians from Bremerton and Seattle. Two men he had previously known stopped to greet him: Cromwell, now a junior captain, and Lieutenant Commander Linbury, the district communication officer and Val's new boss. After a moment's conversation with each of these officers, the younger man was conscious of a knowing expression that dawned in their eyes. Linbury even said, "The last time we met you were celebrating in the American club bar in Shanghai, Preston. Still in training, I see."

His senior moved away and Val grinned wryly to reflect that his new boss thought him tight. For that matter, so had the admiral. Well, despite the odorous bourbon, it took more than two drinks to turn that trick. But wasn't it just his luck to make his first appearance at a cold-sober party with a gang who couldn't hold its liquor and was obvious about it? He turned to regard Field who stood beside him trying to focus his eyes on a critical lady to whom he had just been presented and across whose frock he had already spilled half his cup of tea. From close at hand came Mona Browne's shrill giggle and her sister's high-pitched voice saying, "I feel as if I sort of belong with the navy. I have an uncle who was a major in some war or other."

As he turned a bored shoulder toward this group he caught sight of Lia who was poised on the first stair landing in the entrance hall. A hand on one slim hip pushed back her coat to reveal a trim frock of lipstick red. Her little face was tipped up like a creamy poppy to the sun, and she was in animated conversation with a tall stranger whose back was toward Val.

When the man shifted his position Val was curious enough to ask Sue his name. Brad's wife stared over her shoulder in the direction he indicated. After a moment she uttered a strange, mirthless laugh. "Trust Lia to manage that as quickly as possible," she murmured. "That, Val dear, is Maurice Cordray."

So this was Brad's boss, Cordray! A rather magnificent person with coin yellow hair and—good Lord—a curly golden beard! The man was faultlessly tailored and groomed but the whiskers shouted for coat-of-mail and a tin helmet with dinky wings on either side. "Don't kid me, beautiful," Val said to Sue. "That's a German boy named Siegfried. What'll you bet he doesn't burst into a horn call before the party is over."

"Don't be fantastic," Sue frowned. "His father was a Belgian, his mother a Swede, but he was born here in Bremerton. He lived abroad a lot until his father's death two years ago. He is very rich, Val, with important holdings in this northwest country. But he likes best to work in his studio where he fashions all manner of lovely hand-wrought stuff—jewelry, puppets, masks—things like that."

"Don't tell me he plays a flute when I expected a trumpet." His eyes danced with laughter.

"Don't ever doubt that Maurice Cordray is a trumpet man." Sue's languorous voice warmed. "He is an expert boxer, a business man and an artist. His passion is to create beautiful, unusual things. But he makes his hobbies pay just as he makes his investments yield. Brad says his special talent in business affairs lies in his ability to select his executives, then let them do the work. And the proof of his success is that he has greatly increased the fortune his father passed on to him."

"I suppose he plays about with the yard crowd."

Sue looked away. "Y-e-s, he is beginning to come to the yard again—" she broke off abruptly.

Her manner aroused his curiosity. "What stopped him?"

"Oh, there was a silly misunderstanding. That idiot Tony Eastman made a spectacle of himself because Cordray was merely pleasant to his wife. Truly, Val, it was the greatest injustice because Cordray is charming to all the girls and was only being friendly. I'll wager the whole navy set was disgusted with Tony for driving this man away, for without him this is the dullest place imaginable. How they must thank their lucky stars that little imbecile Eastman has gone to sea duty and Cordray is giving his lovely parties and coming to the yard again."

Sue turned away to speak to Mrs. Field, and Val stood idly watching Lia and her new acquaintance. For some time he had been half-conscious of music coming from the hidden angle of the adjoining room and now a girl's soft contralto began to sing a well remembered air. Suddenly he stiffened. That song—an old poem of Stevenson's—was as well known to him as his own name. Listening intently, only his eyes moved. There was an odd shiver along his spine, his arms tingled, but he seemed powerless to stir.

"Dark brown is the river, golden is the sand,
It flows along forever with trees on either hand,
Green leaves a-floating, castles on the foam,
Boats of mine a-boating, when will you come home——"

Only one person could sing it like that. Suddenly, heedless of the crowd, he pressed toward the music room. When he finally reached the doorway he saw that he was right. It was Jan. Oh Jan, God bless you, honey! He had known just how she'd be poised there by the piano, clear-eyed and young, her hands clasped behind her, chin lifted, the thick golden waves of hair brushed back carelessly to disclose the lovely line of her forehead. That pale green frock with her yellow hair made her look like a jonquil in spring.

"On goes the river and out past the mill,
Away down the valley, away down the hill——"

That funny old kid song! He had played it for her a thousand times while they chanted it together——

"Away down the river, a hundred miles or more
Other little children shall bring my boats ashore,
Shall bring my——"
